HISGEN, FOE OF OIL TRUST, OUT FOR BAY STATE GOVERNOR

ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY AT INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE BANQUET IN SPRINGFIELD.

SPRINGFIELD, July 25.—Asserting anew and with unabated vigor its unalterable opposition to corporation control of the government and its determination that "all special privileges must be abolished," the Independence League in Massachusetts fired the first gun of the State campaign of 1907 by a banquet last night at the Highland House in this city. A feast arranged by members of the league in Springfield and attended by members from various other cities and towns in Western Massachusetts attracted, in midsummer, a gathering of more than 350 prominent men.

Local followers and admirers of the Bay State's anti-Standard Oil champion, Thomas L. Hisgen, took advantage of the occasion to cheer their idol as the next Governor of the Bay State. Mr. Hisgen was one of the lions of the night. He admitted his willingness to serve, at the same time, however, declaring his equal willingness to remain "a fighter in the ranks" if the League should find a more available candidate.

"The nomination," said the Hon. William N. Osgood, of Lowell, State president, "is open to the State. It is not given to any man before the convention has expressed a choice. Such is not the custom of the Independence League, however difficult it may be for leaders and managers for the older parties to comprehend this fact. No 'machine' runs the Independence League or distributes its plums.

IN LEAD OR RANKS.

"My good friend, Mr. Hisgen, is a candidate for the nomination. He may be the nominee. There may be other aspirants, and I venture to say that should the choice of the convention be embodied in some other candidate the nominee will find no more loyal, no more enthusiastic supporter than Thomas L. Hisgen."

There was great applause for this straightforward declaration by the State president, in which it was noticed, Mr. Hisgen joined heartily.

Mr. Hisgen was roundly cheered by his admirers during the evening, as were tributes paid to the patriotic efforts of William Randolph Hearst for the common good.

The banquet was a surprise to Springfield politicians of the old school, a surprise not only in the number of the diners and in the enthusiasm that they manifested, but also in the character and the spirit of the speech-making.

The speakers included Clarence J. Shearn of New York, whose name has been a household word throughout the United States from the beginning of his legal connection with the AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER fights for the people; John T. Cronin, State organizer of the league in the Empire State; John L. Eddy of Needham, chairman of the Executive committee of the Massachusetts committee; B. Gerry Brown of Brockton, who polled 101,000 votes in the Lieutenant-Governorship contest last year and who cut a dollar came within an ace of licking Eben S. Draper; Richard J. Talbot, a rising young Springfield lawyer, who formally placed Mr. Hisgen's name before Massachusetts Leaguers as a candidate for the Governorship; Thomas L. Hisgen, who rehearsed his long battle with Standard Oil as an "Independent" dealer; Register Alfred J. Boulton of King's County, New York, a League officeholder, who has made good; Junius J. Averbach of Anti-Gas Trust fame in Massachusetts, State President Osgood, who made it plain that the Independence League pulls off no tricks in "executive session, and Captain Thomas L. Bates of Roxbury.

NEW YORK MEN RELEASED.

The New Yorkers, Shearn, Cronin and Boulton, came over to see what their Massachusetts brothers look like and to say an encouraging word to them. They had a fine time. "We are delightfully surprised," Mr. Cronin said. "Not only by the numbers and the evident character of the banqueters but by the enthusiasm manifested.

Mr. Shearn, who was the first speaker introduced by Toastmaster George W. Curtis and Chairman Richard A. Hemingway of the Springfield City Committee had called his young secretary to preside, was particularly well pleased. The celebrated Hearst attorney got a special salvo of applause when he claimed everybody present as "neighbor" and surprised some by claiming Northampton as his birthplace. When they learned that Shearn is a Bay Stater the Massachusetts Leaguers seemed more than ever proud of him.

Others of the head table, in addition to the speakers already named, were Greenville S. MacFarland of Cambridge, who created a political sensation a few weeks ago when he resigned the chairmanship of the executive committee of the Democratic state committee to cast his lot with the League; Inheritance Tax Commissioner S. O. Stevenson of Brooklyn, secretary of the League in Kings county, N. Y.; William Crosby, president of the League in Worcester, and Charles G. Power, executive secretary of the Massachusetts state committee.

Albany Delegation.

A delegation of Hisgenites from Albany, N. Y., included M. L. Rowe, George C. Hisgen, George T. Clapham, John J. Britt, W. W. McCune, Charles E. Shelly, John E. Dugan and W. G. Sheehan. Others present included former Representative H. A. Booth, Attorney S. P. Cullinan, former Secretary Alexander Hallenstein, of the Democratic City Committee; Attorney John T. Moriarty, former President Simon P. Griffin, of the Central Labor Union; Attorney H. A. Cross, Attorney James B. Reilly and James H. Lyons, of Springfield; Secretary William E. Moran, of the Holyoke Central Labor Union; Urna Fleming, of Holyoke, president of the National Mule Spinners of America, and a delegation from Northampton, which included Charles Clark of the Herald.

Talbot Names Hisgen.

The name of Thomas L. Hisgen was presented by Richard J. Talbot in an eloquent address. Mr. Talbot, who is a Springfield lawyer, was the nominee of the Democratic party for Senator in 1904 from that district. He attracted attention recently by obtaining a brilliant victory before the Supreme Judicial Court, when he attacked, on the ground of its unconstitutionality, the peddlers' license law, arguing that it was legislation discriminating against foreigners and foreign goods, and secured a decision in his favor.

Each mention of the name of Mr. Hisgen was received with applause, and considerable enthusiasm was manifested when Mr. Talbot called the attention of the audience to the fact that the Independence League alone offered to the citizens of the State an opportunity to vote against the merger.

Mr. Talbot spoke as follows:

"Scramble for Office."

"No political party can command or expect allegiance unless it consistently advocates principles which appeal to the intelligence of the voters. Without an issue, without an effort to advance, politics degenerates into a scramble for office and citizenship becomes an empty name.

"There was a time in the history of the State when the principles of her political parties were clear and distinct and candidates were selected because they represented issues. The Democratic party would not then have been guilty of nominating one whose hope of success was founded upon a belief that he could win by asking an appeal to voters of the opposite party, upon an issue originally framed by their own leaders and which never a convention of the Democratic demand for a complete revision of the tariff. I refer to Canadian reciprocity.

"To-day the Democratic party turns for its leadership to the young and gallant people of Massachusetts repudiated in 1904, driven by a tremendous plurality to indorse the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, and buried beneath an avalanche of votes the nominee whom the leaders thought would particularly appeal to conservative old Massachusetts.

Speaking of the proposed railway merger, Mr. Talbot said both Governor Guild and Henry M. Whitney agree that the merger should be permitted.

"They both agree that the grand old Commonwealth is so weak, so powerless, that it can only be saved if the National Government acts in its defence. And there is no difference between the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad's becoming owning one road and owning all the roads, and that competition is a thing to be feared and consolidation a desirable condition; that the merger which the National government prevented on the Pacific Coast would have met the approval of the citizens of Massachusetts.

"The problem is one the people can solve if they will. There will be no merger if the people of the Commonwealth rise in their might and by their ballot at caucus and convention and polls enter a protest against this betrayal of their interests.

"The Independence League has an issue peculiarly its own. When it 1907 Thomas L. Hisgen induced the Legislature of the State to take up the question of curbing the Standard Oil Trust, when he procured a bill which has already been tried in several great States, when he sought to secure for the citizens of the State the protection in the price of oil, which his competition had already secured for the County of Hampden, who would have prophesied failure?"

BEDROS HAMPARZOOMIAN, KILLED RICH RUG DEALER

ARMENIAN ASSASSIN CONFESSES

Slayer of New York Merchant Reveals Names of Men in Murder Plot---Whole Story of Conspiracy Told to Police.

NEW YORK, July 25.—In a confession made to the police to-day, Bedors Hampartzoomian, the assassin of the millionaire Armenian rug dealer, laid bare the secrets of the terrorists' organization to which he belongs.

The murderer gave the names of the prominent members of the society back of the murder in this city, furnished a list of their victims and a list of those who were doomed to die.

The names of intended victims include prominent men in this city, Boston and other Armenian centres. The startling information was laid before District Attorney Jerome, and detectives were at once detailed on the case.

The facts were also telegraphed to the other cities where members of the blackmailing society are now located, and where more tragedies are expected at any moment.

Wholesale arrests will be made, it is believed, at once in this city.

The head of the order, according to Hampartzoomian, is an Armenian known among his countrymen all over the country, who is the possessor of a fortune made through the society's operations. He is either a resident of New York or Worcester, Mass.

The confession is understood to have been obtained through an Armenian spy placed in the murderer's cell by the police, hence that he was another member of the same organization sent here to kill a second object of the order's enmity.

REIGN OF TERROR FROM THREATS OF ASSASSIN BAND

Determined to root out the Armenian murder society that was responsible for the death of Tavshanjian, the millionaire rug dealer of New York, the police of all the large cities of the United States have begun a search for members of this Black Hand brotherhood.

Especial attention is being given to the matter in Boston and Worcester. The real head of the Hunchagist organization, it is declared, makes his home in Worcester, and it is believed that there are many active members in Boston.

Following the killing of the New York rug man, a dozen of the prominent Armenians of New York, Boston and other cities received notes in which their murder was threatened unless they made big money contributions to the society.

The police of New York declare that the ringleader of the society is in Worcester and that the assassin of the rich rug merchant, on his way to New York to commit the crime, stopped at Worcester. The authorities believe that he acted upon instructions he received at Worcester.

Plan to Oust Terrorists.

One of them, M. H. Guleian, whose death was threatened next Monday, has consulted the police of Boston, and they have started an investigation. A mass meeting of the Armenians in this city is to be held, at which further action will be considered toward driving the terrorists from the country.

As a result of the assassination in New York and the numerous murder threats that followed, a reign of terror exists in the Armenian settlements of the country. "This is nothing short of anarchy," said Mr. Guleian to-day, "and the gang of madmen must be wiped out of existence. What you," he continued, "in favor of the righteous revolution against the Turkish government, but this method of a gang of ignorant people in blackmailing money from the people is outrageous and must stop."

Almost prostrated with fear that some harm may come to her husband, Mrs. Galesian, although under constant police guard in her home on Commonwealth avenue, talked for a short time so-day to an AMERICAN reporter.

That her husband will be killed on Monday she does not believe, but she fears that when the proper opportunity is afforded the agents of the society will eventually carry out their purpose.

Wife Haunted by Threat.

"It's terrible to think of," she said. "We were so happy here in our beautiful home. Why, only last year in London a man was killed following a threat, and then again another case followed in Chi-

STEAMBOATS COLLIDE; PASSENGERS IN PANIC

THE FRANK JONES STRIKES THE RHODE ISLAND IN FALL RIVER DOCKS.

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, July 25.—In a collision between the steamships Frank Jones, of the Enterprise Line and the Rhode Island of the Neptune Line, at the docks here to-day, both boats were badly damaged, and passengers, asleep in the staterooms, were thrown into momentary panic.

The Rhode Island was at her dock, and the Jones was trying to back in. It is said that there was a misunderstanding of signals between the pilot house and the engine room of the Jones, and, as a result, the latter crashed into the Neptune boat.

Striking amidships, the Jones tore away the greater part of the woodwork and the railing in the vicinity of the pilot house on the Rhode Island.

Passengers who were asleep on the Rhode Island rushed out and climbed to the railing until assured that there was no danger. On the Frank Jones a number of people were on deck waiting for the landing, and some were thrown off their feet.

By far the greater damage was done to the Rhode Island, although it is said that the steamship's hull is uninjured.

After the collision, the Frank Jones pulled away and made her dock without further assistance. Another boat will be put on the Neptune Line in place of the Rhode Island, which will be laid up for repairs.

STATE FACES CRISIS IN WAR ON RAILROAD

"MUST OBEY THE LAW," SAYS NORTH CAROLINA GOVERNOR.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 25.—It looks like a physical clash between federal authority and the North Carolina State officials. The situation is more serious than at any time since the railroad fight began. Governor Glenn's refusal to consider Assistant Attorney General Sandford's peace proposition, supposedly direct from President Roosevelt, means a crisis, for in spite of Judge Pritchard's threats of commitment for contempt, the State officials are still hot after the railways.

Evidently in anticipation of and early start in the contempt proceedings threatened by the federal government against the State authorities, United States District Attorney Hotton arrived here to-day and held conference with the local State Judges.

So far as known, he made no threats, but his attitude was unmistakable. Immediately following his arrival the Southern Railway officials called another conference. There is no hope, however, that they will recede from their position.

The compromise United States Assistant Attorney-General Sandford endeavored to induce the State authorities to accept provides for preparation of the railroad's injunction suit against them for immediate hearing, an appeal of the habeas corpus suits to the Supreme Court, similar action in the State courts on the $200,000 fine against the railroads, a final submission of the entire controversy to the Federal supreme Court, and suspension of the rate law proceedings in the meantime.

"I shall consider no such offer," says Governor Glenn, "until the railroads comply with the law."

ENTERPRISE SAILS FOR GIBRALTAR

The Massachusetts nautical training ship Enterprise slipped her anchors before the sun rose to-day, and, under full sail and steam power, sped away, bound for Gibraltar and other Mediterranean ports. Under command of Captain William F. Low, the Summer cruise, which was united when several of the cadets left the vessel at New London on account of the fare served aboard, was resumed to-day. No regular steward was aboard of the vessel. In the place of the one dismissed Captain Low engaged a professional baker.

Yesterday was the busiest day aboard the ship since the close of the investigation of the complaints of dissatisfied cadets, who had left the ship, by a court of inquiry appointed by Governor Guild, for the cadets knew that orders to sail were at hand. Final shore leave was granted the cadets to purchase their sea outfits, and everyone busied getting the ship ready for her cruise.

It is known that eighteen of the cadets who enrolled at New London returned to the vessel and sailed with her to-day.

It is expected that the ship will take from twenty to twenty-four days in sailing to Gibraltar.

COWARDICE OF POLICE CAUSES BIG SHAKEUP

NEW YORK, July 25.—Police Commissioner Bingham began to-day an investigation into the workings of his department and the conduct of many of his officers which promises such a shake-up as has not occurred before in years.

One of the cases most discreditable to the police is that of the Warner-Norting-Wilson murder of last Tuesday. John C. Wilson, the millionaire clubman and fast automobilist whose Warner shot as the former was about to grant his appeal for a small loan, died last night.

Commissioner Bingham says frankly that he thinks police inefficiency was responsible for Warner's escape after he killed Miss Esther Norting and his subsequent mad race through the streets ending with Wilson's murder. He will begin at once an inquiry into the cases of Patrolmen S. H. Walsh and T. L. Rooney, suspended on charges of cowardice in the pursuit of Warner.

HAYWOOD'S LIFE CRY OF CLASS STRIFE

—DARROW

Counsel for Prisoner, Weeping, Bitterly Arraigns State and Witnesses.

DOUBTS HAWLEY'S SANITY

BOISE, Idaho, July 24.—The crowning infamy of Orchard's infamous life was his disclosure of the true identity which brought ignominy, scorn and contumely upon the name his Quaker parents made honorable, and a stage that his little girl must bear.

"If Haywood has to die he will die as he has lived, with his face to the foe. Haywood is not a coward, whatever else he may be.

"If this jury hangs Haywood that Orchard's worthless life may be saved, then society would be safer with Orchard at large than in the hands of Idaho juries.

"If George Washington, with all his great reputation for veracity, had come here as a witness and had been contradicted as Orchard has been, the Father of His Country would have gone out of this court room disgraced and accounted the greatest Ananias of the ages.

"I have sat here with you men for two or three months and I have tried to read you. There may be some hideous plan deep down in your souls—I cannot see them—but somehow or other, I have never felt that there was any danger of your believing that perjuring monster.

"If this jury, in the absence and before God, must have a sacrifice for the mine owners, then we will furnish the victim. But when Haywood drops the flag of labor at the gates of Heaven hands will take it up to carry it on to victory.

Darrow Is Unique.

Mr. Darrow's oratory is new to the people of this section, and, of course, there is much interest in what he has to say. He is uniquely original in talking to the men who are to pronounce judgment on Haywood and Western Federation of Miners.

In the opening hour he sacrificed James H. Hawley, regardless that he was addressing the latter's friends and acquaintances. He told the jury that Hawley is more concerned in building another oil queen his new house, which was built since this case began, than he is in protecting the integrity of the State of Idaho and bringing to justice the real assassin of Governor Steunenberg.

Darrow emphasized the world-wide importance of this case, saying in the jury's verdict will rest the hopes and aspirations of all men who labor to sustain their daily life. The defendant, he said, is on trial for his life among aliens. Men who do not know or sympathize with his method of thought or his life purposes are to pass judgment upon him. And if those view of life, industrially and socially, is different, possibly better, than that of Haywood and his miner associates.

"Some years of pity had been brushed aside, when he had thrown away the masked figure of Harry Orchard. When invective had run its course, this lawyer stood at last aggressive upon the platform of class war. In portraying it he was more than vigorous, his energy and force compelled admiration even as he inspired astonishment. For, raising his voice and standing within three feet of the nearest men on the panel, he said:

Fight Is Against Labor.

"You are asked to take Haywood's life because down in Colorado and up in the Coeur d'Alenes he has been on the opposite side of the position taken by the Mine Owners' Association. Because he has been organizing the poor, the weak, the toilers, has been welding together in one great brotherhood these men, has been calling them to fight and struggle for their common cause, for that reason he has raised up against him the power and the hand of that body of men and you are asked to kill Bill Haywood—to kill him.

"I am here to speak plainly. Mr. Haywood is not my greatest concern. Other men have died before him. Other men have been martyrs to a holy cause since the world began. Other men have forgotten their selfishness, struggled for humanity, worked for the poor and weak and have been sacrificed. They have been sacrificed in prison, on the scaffold, in the flame. They have met death, and he can meet his if you twelve men say he must.

Hate No Cure for Hatred.

"But you short-sighted gentlemen of the prosecution, you blind mine owners, you people who would cure hatred with hate, you who think you can crush out the feelings and the hopes and the aspirations of men by placing a noose around Haywood's neck, you who are seeking to kill him, not because he is Bill Haywood, but because he represents a class—pardon me so blind, don't be so foolish as to believe you can strangle the Western Federation of Miners when you tie the rope around his neck.

"Don't be so blind as to believe that if you make these fetters from the grave you will kill the labor movement of the world. Want to see that Bill Haywood can't die unless you kill him. If, at the behest of the mob, you should kill Bill Haywood, he is mortal and he will die; but I want to say that 100 feet from the front center of labor at the open grave where Bill Haywood lies if there be spirit of disbound and seaffolds and fire, in spite of persecution or fury, there will arise a will carry it on to victory in the end."

SAYSWOMAN SLEW MAN, BURNED BODY IN STOVE

FORMER SUITOR ACCUSES MRS. HAND OF GHASTLY MURDER.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

HOLLY BEACH, N. J., July 25.—Joseph Warren, a laborer of this place, accuses Mrs. Mary Hand of a murder more horrible than the Guldensuppe tragedy.

According to this tale, the woman killed an aged Philadelphian named Smith or Schmidt and buried him under a log. Aided by a man, for whom she later dug him up, carried him into her house, carved him into small pieces and burned them in her kitchen stove.

Mrs. Hand characterizes Warren's story as the raving of a demented and rejected suitor. Although at liberty, she is under surveillance while the police here and in Philadelphia are investigating. The Philadelphia police assert there is no Smith or Schmidt missing from Philadelphia. However, Watson, apparently sane, sticks steadfastly to his story. He says:

"One day in March the woman told me she had killed a man. She said she grew tired of having him around and gave him a slow poison in the shape of 'love powders.' After his death she and a man carried the body at night to a marsh four blocks from her home and buried it. But they became afraid it might be discovered and brought it back to the house.

"I called there soon after this and saw the woman and man together. There was a redhot fire in the stove and a peculiar odor about the place. The woman said to me: 'It's all right now; we have burned up the man that was found in the marsh. I inquired how they got the body into the stove and was told: 'We cut it up.' The man with her was wearing one of her aprons."

LIVE 'CORPSE' WAS SENT TO UNDERTAKER

Chinaman, Victim of Opium Poisoning, Was Not Dead, But in Coma.

After narrowly escaping being buried alive Ching Yuen, a Chinese laundryman, was at the Relief Hospital early to-day from opium poisoning.

The man was found in his bunk in the laundry at No. 2047 Washington street, Roxbury, early yesterday morning apparently dead. His employer tried to arouse him, but finding that his efforts were unsuccessful sent for the undertaker.

S. Y. Tank, a Hayden avenue business man, sent Ching Yuen to the Roxbury laundry as he had a great opportunity there. He retired early yesterday morning, but before doing so smoked an opium pill for two. Only a few more than were good for him.

"Corpse" Is Alive.

Briggs' undertaking rooms were notified, and two men with the wagon and trans fer basket, went to the laundry to remove the body for burial preparations. As they placed the body in the basket they noted a slight relaxation of the muscles, but, as that is usual in handling dead bodies, they thought nothing of it.

On Tremont street a sound similar to a moan reached Mr. Briggs's ears, and soon both the men heard a sound coming from inside the basket. Elliot, who was driving, piled his whip, and Osborne Briggs jumped into the rear of the team and took the lid off the basket.

Loosening the straps and removing the heavy covering he found for certainty that his "corpse" was alive, but unconscious. Ye wagon flew through the streets to the hospital. The man died today.

Ching came to this country from Canton, China, a few years ago and went to live in Worcester, where he has a nephew, Ching Faun, in the laundry business.

RAINS BLOWS ON WOMAN TO SAVE HER LIFE

Rescuer of Two Forced to Knock Out Hysterical Drowning Swimmer.

NEW YORK, July 25.—To rescue a man and women from drowning at Coney Island yesterday afternoon, Julian Carabbo, an attorney living at No. 801 West Twenty-third street, Coney Island, had to beat the woman into insensibility. She is Mrs. Carrie Enright, and lives at Prospect Park West and Twentieth street, Brooklyn. Carabbo is a partner of Senator Fitzgerald.

The woman and Daniel Hardy of Brooklyn, the man to whom she clung, were several hundred yards from the shore and the coolness with which Carabbo accomplished his feat has won widespread applause of the Coney Island Beach.

Mrs. Enright, who is known for her skill as a swimmer on the West End beaches, was one of the few people in the water off the foot of West Twenty-fifth street on yesterday afternoon. Suddenly she screamed and sank. Hardy threw off his coat and dashed into the water. He was closely followed by Carabbo.

Hardy reached the woman first and she almost exhausted, threw her arms about him and dragged him down. They were useless and they sank together once. Hardy called Carabbo's name. Mrs. Enright was hysterical and Hardy was also exhausted.

Hardy tried to grab Carabbo, but the latter saw that all would be drowned unless he could free Hardy. He swam behind the woman and with several blows on his jaw rendered her unconscious. Hardy was then able to support her and Mrs. Enright was lifted into a lifeboat that had rowed out to help. Dr. Orton, of the Emma Hospital, was waiting on the shore and worked over her for half an hour before she was resuscitated.

WOMAN FOILED THIEVES.

A daring attempt to loot the residence of Mrs. Hale Jacobs, one of the wealthier women in the Back Bay district, was foiled by the late Elihu Converse, was frustrated by the presence of mind of Mrs. Jacobs, who scared the men away.

PAY THE LAST HONOR TO DEAD LABOR LEADER

The funeral of James N. Endelle, for many years one of the leading labor officials of this city, who died Monday, was held yesterday afternoon at his late residence, No. 39 Evergreen street, Jamaica Plain. Labor leaders and delegates from many unions attended the services.

Rev. Sumner Barnes, pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church, officiated. At the close of the services Mr. Endelle was taken to Forest Hills Cemetery, where the interment took place by the family. There was a profusion of floral tributes.

Among those who attended the services were President Arthur M. Huddell, Patrick Maloney, John J. Feeney and James F. Crozier, representing the Central Labor Union; James Dunn, vice-president of the A. F. of L.; Thomas F. Tracy, chairman of the National Legislative Committee of the A. F. of L.; William F. Fraher, secretary of the International Seamen's Union; Frank B. Monaghan, ex-International president of the Steam Engineers' Union; Fred J. Kneeland, ex-International president of the Bakers' Union; Aaron John T. Cashman and President James A. Holey of the Branding Irons' Council; President E. Frank Moorhouse, Agent Harry Noble and E. J. Fitzgerald of the Painters' Union; Secretary Henry Abraham and I. Benjamin of the Cigarmakers' Union; President Edward Colson and Secretary-Treasurer Jh. D. Driscoll of the State Branch, A. F. of L.; President R. W. Garrity and John H. Magee of the Bricklayers' Union; Frank Cuney and F. H. Maguire of the Carpenters' Union; Aaron and National President John F. Tobin of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

SMOKE LAWS ARE ENFORCED

—DR. DUROIN

Complaints that the smoke nuisance laws have not been rigidly enforced by the Board of Health, and that Boston should be cleaner, at least during Old Home Week, were to-day discussed by Dr. Durgin, chairman of the board, who declared that everything possible is being done to abate the nuisance. Dr. Durgin said:

"We have cut down the smoke nuisance about 85 per cent. Most that under the law we are powerless so far as the railroads and the public service corporations are concerned. The smoke which comes from the exempted sources is now, as it has been, one of the greatest discomforts in the city, and an injustice to the business concerns which have complied with the regulations of the Board of Health."

OTTAWA, Canada, July 25.—There were one or two American flags put here at the City Hall with decorations in connection with a carnival. A committee of citizens had ordered them removed. It was thought best to do this rather than have any trouble over the matter.

WAIVES EXTRADITION.

Fred R. Turner, who was arrested in Nantucket on a charge of embezzling $780 from the postoffice at Oakland, Cal., where he was formerly employed as a clerk, waived examination before United States Commissioner Hayes and was taken to California to-day.

JAIL AND FINE FOR INSULTER OF FLAG

MARQUETTE, Mich., July 25.—Following his conviction for tearing down a United States flag and then trampling upon it, James Grant, a British subject, has been brought here to serve thirty days in jail. He was also fined $10.

JAILED FOR RUIN OF STOLEN AUTO

YORK BEACH, Me., July 25.—N. W. Williams, who it is alleged on Monday night took a $3,000 automobile from Roger G. Sullivan at his summer home here, and wrecked it at Rye Beach, was brought here from Portsmouth and arraigned before Judge Hildreth for larceny. He was held in $500 bonds and in default was committed to the Alfred jail.

MRS. WILLIAMS, VICTIM OF MAYOR'S POLITICS

How proud Mayor Fitzgerald ought to feel! I know what they want out here, and what do they care for the little children or their tired, overworked mothers? He'll have a noisy slub here, with plenty of liquor.—Mrs. Williams on Mayor Fitzgerald's determination to obtain her home for Ward 13 political club.

POLICE NOW HUNT TERRORIST BAND

cago, and after the terrible affair surrounding our dear friend Tavshanjian, why should I not fear?"

Mrs. Gulesian is a beautiful New England woman, and with their pretty little daughter Margaret, the household has been one of the happiest.

Priest Makes Denials.

New York and Worcester Armenians say that Father Mardigossian, who is now in New York, could tell a lot about the murder and the society back of it. Mardigossian was ordained a priest in Worcester eight years ago. He left Worcester, the Armenians there say, because of their dissatisfaction with his handling of money that was raised.

The priest was found to-day in New York to a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN. He was in the cafe he frequents at Lexington avenue and Twenty-seventh street. He is pastor of the Apostolic Armenian Church, which borrows room in St. Chrysostom's Protestant Episcopal Chapel at Thirty-ninth street and Seventh avenue.

He wears a well made suit of priestly cut and large gold-rimmed spectacles. He doesn't look like a man who would cause scores of successful business men to rush up the District Attorney and beg for his arrest.

"I am at a loss to understand why they should say such things about me," he said between puffs at his cigar and while a lot of swarthy men stood listening.

"I was treasurer of the Hintchagist in 1905 and 1906 and I collected about $20,000 or $25,000," said the priest. "I can't tell now just how much I collected, but it was all sent to aid the oppressed and suffering in our native country. I left the society some time ago."

He admitted that he had called on Calibenkian, the rug importer at Fifth avenue and Twenty-seventh street, and had received 10 for the Hintchist cause. He denied ever having threatened anyone or having displayed a letter telling of the murder of Dauglian and asking for money. He said that he never went personally to the place of business of A. Karagheusian, told of the Constantinople murder and asked for a large sum.

Seek Only Death of Spies.

"Why," remarked Father Mardoogesian with great deliberation, "I just called on Mr. Karagheusian around Christmas time. I did this in line with my duties as pastor, just to pass a Christmas greeting. Mr. Karagheusian would not see me. He was afraid I was going to kill him."

He said that Turkish spies had attended his meetings and had sent home the names of persons he referred to in his sermons as patriots. These persons, the priest said, were persecuted at home. The killing of these spies, according to Father Mardoogesian's way of thinking, is all right.

"The patriots do not want to kill," says the priest, "but a spy who sends news to Turkey they would kill."

THIRD RAIL SYSTEM FOR PORTLAND LINES

BANGOR, July 25.—Two new electric lines to radiate from Portland are to adopt a third rail system. One line, on which the surveys were begun last week, will be built from Portland to Brighton. The route is forty-two miles in length. The work of construction will be begun in September. The other electric line, which has just been financed and will be in operation, the proprietors say, within a year, will run between Portland and Lewiston.

WOMAN FLAYS FITZGERALD AS PERSECUTOR

Mrs. Williams Says Mayor Seeks to Oust Her from House.

A VICTIM OF POLITICS

Charging that Mayor John F. Fitzgerald is trying to drive her from her home and break up her little free school and kindergarten at 1800 Dorchester avenue, so that he may have the building for a political clubhouse, Mrs. Annie E. Williams, in an interview with a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN, to-day denounced the Mayor for his action.

"Many a mother and baby in Boston are suffering to-day from Fitzgerald rule," said Mrs. Williams. "Over here in Ward 24 the Fitzgerald crowd will rob the families on both ends—the former have been robbed in Fitzgerald politics on one hand and by Fitzgerald rum on the other."

Helps Poor Mothers.

Mrs. Williams is one of the oldest trained nurses in the State. She was at one time in the Massachusetts General Hospital. She is the mother of Miss Hattie Williams, the clever actress. Her home, from which she fears forcible eviction at any time, is on Dorchester avenue, between Shepton and Edwin streets.

"I came here a year ago," said Mrs. Williams, "and established a day nursery and school for young children. I had always been interested in working for the relief work, especially among mothers and children. This section appealed to me for that particular work. There are many poor families and mothers who can't go out to work. I began taking in children so that their poor mothers might not worry over them during the day, and I established also a little school.

"Leading the way to the spacious front room of her home, Mrs. Williams pointed out a cosily arranged schoolroom with platform, blackboard, teacher's desk, rows of chairs and all other necessary accessories.

Taught the Little Ones.

"Here I taught the little ones all that their young minds could comprehend. They were generally children of from two to five years of age. I gave them their first lessons in learning to read and write. I taught them manners and I taught them how to sew. The house was in bad shape when I came here.

"I had it painted, had the windows all reset, and put in new plumbing. Early in January I first heard that the house that I wanted for a Fitzgerald club. The agent who has charge of the property told me that the club would give $25 per month for it, because while I had been paying $16.

"In May, when I went to pay my rent, I was told that the Fitzgerald men had taken the house. I was surprised at this and refused to get out.

"Wanted by Mayor."

"The house is owned by Miss Mercy A. Bailey of the Normal Art School, and I was given to understand that I would have the first chance on purchasing it, and I had arranged to purchase it the coming October.

"I refused to get out. Then a man who represented himself as coming from the Mayor's office came and asked me to give up the house saying that the Mayor was a man who always got what he want after and that he wanted this house badly.

"I still refused to give it up. I was afraid, though, that I would have to get out and I began to notice that some of the children, whose bodies I took care of, began to be afraid of being seen about my house.

"I finally told Mayor Fitzgerald that while my nursery and school was doing more good in Ward 24 than any political club could, I would allow the John F. Fitzgerald club to use my house after election, provided everything was kept orderly and that no intoxicating liquors were brought in. The Mayor's man said he could not agree to any such conditions.

"I learned that the man's name is John Hoar, who said he came from the Mayor's office.

"Ordered to Move Out."

"Then Manus J. Fish, a friend of the Mayor's, showed up here with a year's lease of the premises and asked me to get out. I refused again. On Saturday last W. H. Swift, constable, called here and gave me a notice to quit.

"The notice was signed by Fish, the new lessee, and told me to quit himself by July 1. But I am still here.

"I suppose the next move will be to forcibly evict me. Of course, I can't help it, but I protest against the action of the arrest and break up my little school and the time at which the suit was brought and for such a period previous as may seem desirable."

Interrupted by Chandler.

The hearing was begun before Judge Chamberlain at 10 a. m. to-day. As General Streeter was about to proceed with his arguments to his objections filed last week, former Senator Chandler, leading counsel for the "next friends" interrupted.

"I have received a letter from General Streeter," said Senator Chandler, "in which he asks that the 'next friends' file a bond in a sufficient sum for the payment of costs, as is required when plaintiffs are non-residents.

"I would state that the 'next friends' are unable to do this. They are all poor, and I shall later ask the court to suspend this rule in our interest. I also wish to give the parties that I shall at this time pass my motion to have an allowance set aside from Mrs. Eddy's estate for the defraying of the expenses of taking testimony."

General Streeter in his argument took up his objection to the issue formulated by Judge Chamberlain and submitted to Judge Edgar Aldrich, Dr. George F. Jelly and Hosea W. Parker, as masters who are to investigate the competency of Mrs. Eddy. General Streeter objected that the investigation of Mrs. Eddy's competency for such a period previous as may seem desirable," gave the investigation too great scope. He declared emphatically:

"What if it should be found that she was incompetent March 1 and entirely competent a year previous? That period is covered by the acts of the defendant and her competency would certainly be important in the hearing."

'NEXT FRIENDS' IN EDDY CASE CALLED POOR

Chandler Says They Cannot File Bonds, Asks Rule's Suspension.

Special to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., July 25.—Declaring that the "next friends" of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy were too poor to file bonds, former Senator William E. C. Chandler declared to-day in the hearing before Judge Robert N. Chamberlain in the scope of the investigation into the competency of Mrs. Eddy to manage her own affairs, that he would later ask the courts suspend the ruling requiring that bonds be filed by his non-resident clients.

General Frank S. Streeter, in his argument before Judge Chamberlain, objected vigorously to the scope of the commission's powers as outlined by Judge Chamberlain, that the commissioners should investigate Mrs. Eddy's competency, both at the time at which the suit was brought and for such a period previous as may seem desirable.

Interrupted by Chandler.

The heading was begun before Judge Chamberlain at 10 a. m. to-day. As General Streeter was about to proceed with his arguments to his objections filed last week, former Senator Chandler, leading counsel for the "next friends," interrupted.

"I have received a letter from General Streeter," said Senator Chandler, "in which he asks that the 'next friends' file a bond in a sufficient sum for the payment of costs, as is required when plaintiffs are non-residents.

FLAG PROTECTS FAVORITE TREE

BANGOR, July 25.—Because the wiremen for the Atlantic Shore Railway were to cut the limb off a tree on her property, Mrs. George Bragdon of Wells, wrapped the tree in the United States colors and draped a flag from the limb to be sacrificed and then stood under the tree and for several hours held at bay the force of wiremen, defying them "to pull down the flag." Mrs. Bragdon had no objection to the rails of the Atlantic Shore Line railway passing in front of her house, but when the wiremen started to trim a small tree on her property that spread over the tracks of the road she made a protest.

WATTS' 'DONT-S' FOR HOME WEEK

Police Chief Watts will change about 200 policemen from their present beat officers to plain clothes men and scatter them broadcast about the Common, Public Garden and the streets, that the public may be given the best of protection from pickpockets and the like, who, he fears, are now coming to Old Home Week by invitation like real Old Home Week people.

Chief Watts has offered a few sensible suggestions to the public:

"Don't leave your pocketbook under the mat when you go out.

"Don't leave a sign on your door saying you'll be back in two hours.

"Don't wear jewelry where it shows prominently when in the crowds on the streets.

"Don't put your fob chain in a vest pocket.

"Don't show a roll of bills or anything of value in a public place."

Oriental Wizard at Vanity Fair to Bury Beautiful Girl Alive

Rhode Island in Great Excitement Over the Coming Feat of Omar Sami.

TO-MORROW THE DAY SET

Woman Will Be Placed in Casket With Glass Top, So All Can See Her.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 25.—All Rhode Island is excited and on the very tiptoe of suspense, for to-morrow afternoon, as the sun is fast declining in the west, Omar Sami, the occult magician and conjurer of Calcutta, India, will consign pretty Florence Gibson, a winsome girl of twenty-two years, of Riverside, to a living tomb at Vanity Fair.

On the sun-bathed board walk to-day rests a gaily-colored casket, in which he is to be used when the young woman fails under the weird spell of Omar Sami. Already the grave in which the pretty girl is to be buried alive yawns eagerly for its prey.

Glass Top on Casket.

Sami, the magician, who every day defies all laws of nature when he wafts right out over the heads of his audience, a pretty woman, apparently unsupported, says that he will cause Miss Gibson to remain in her living grave over Sunday, and probably for a full week.

The girl is to be placed under the spell of the conjurer at about 5 o'clock to-morrow afternoon in the presence of everyone who is at Vanity Fair at that hour. Then she will be placed in the fine casket, the box carefully and hermetically sealed in the presence of a committee of physicians, and lowered into her living tomb.

A glass top is to be placed on the casket and electric light bulbs placed within so that the curious may gaze upon her silent features at any time and be convinced, beyond doubt, that the inanimate girl is really deep in the ground.

Answers To Advertisement.

Miss Gibson answered the following advertisement, which the Vanity Fair Company caused to be inserted in a dozen evidence papers last week: "Wanted—A man who is willing to be buried alive at Vanity Fair."

The management of the Fair was astonished when a comely young woman presented herself for the despatful position.

"I am ready to be buried alive if you desire it," she said. "I live at Narragansett terrace, Riverside. My name is Florence Gibson. At present I am out of work, and I am willing to undergake the risk if you are to have me do so."

Omar Sami was consulted. He saw the young woman. He found that she most readily yielded to his spell, and he accepted her.

Miss Florence Gibson, the beautiful young woman of Riverside, R. I., who is to be hypnotized and then buried alive by Omar Lami, the Oriental magician, to-morrow afternoon at Vanity Fair, Rhode Island's "Park Beautiful."

So, to-morrow, in the presence of thousands, Florence Gibson will pass under the spell of Hindoo Omar Sami and lose consciousness and all but the faintest semblance of life, will be placed in the rich casket and buried in the earth, to remain there until her master resuscitates her and places her among the living once more.

BUFFALO CLUB WINNER OF GLIDDEN TOUR TROPHY

OWNERSHIP OF HOWER HONORS WON'T BE DECIDED FOR SEVERAL DAYS AT LEAST.

BY J. C. KERRISON.
Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, July 25.—While deciding the temporary ownership of the Glidden trophy the A. A. A. Contest Board of Appeal in this city yesterday afternoon, leaves much to be desired. It was in a sense, neither a tour nor a contest. First it was one and then the other, and at still other times it was neither.

The ownership of the Hower trophy is yet to be decided, as it will be several days at least, before it is known whether a White Steamer or the Stoddard-Dayton gasoline runabout has proven the best right to claim and own that trophy.

In the meanwhile the Buffalo Automobile Club team consisting of two Thomas Flyers, two Pierce Great Arrows and a Packard can enjoy its victory, over its closest rival, the Pittsburg club, whose team consists of two Pierce Great Arrows, a Packard and a Welch.

Maxwells Show Well.

Although not a prize winner, not having a car in the clean score class it must be admitted that the Westchester team rendered an excellent account of itself, especially when it is remembered that this team consisted of the lightest powered cars, all Maxwells, one of which refired the second day out, making at one full score a team total of 233 1-3 points. These cars did excellent service.

The Detroit Club lost every one of its score—lost 1,000 points and did not have a car among the contestants at the finish. The only one of the runabouts to finish in the Hower trophy competition other than the two clean score cars was the Cole runabout driven by Archie Hughes, which was penalized six points.

The tour was one of 1570 miles and lasted over a period of twelve days. It was a hard tour from start to finish and severely tested the cars and drivers. It did not, however, develop any structural weakness on any cars, the weak points developed being mainly on springs, axles and steering knuckles.

Tires of course suffered greatly, but it is not surprising that such should be the case considering the manner in which they were used throughout the trip. The tires were knocked and mauled about without taking any care or consideration of them. The trip proved that the tires of to-day in mechanical details great advancement has been made.

All Had Their Troubles.

While twenty of the cars finished with clean scores it must not be taken as granted that they were free from troubles. Every car had its stubborn moments. The one that did not does not exist. These troubles, however, were slight indeed as compared to the experiences of previous years. Not one of the tourists but what was glad to have the tour come to an end. Few, however, could see the reasons why or the benefits from the long drawn out and entirely unnecessary parade in New York City. It was done to amuse the people enroute and please the chairman, who, as leader of parades, has made a record for himself during the progress of the tour. Yesterday's run was a decidedly easy one. It was neither a contest nor a tour. It was a veritable crawl from New Brunswick to Jersey City, the chairman making the pace much to the disgust of those forced to follow in single long, never ending cloud of dust. Not a car was penalized on that run, but instead of the 94 miles of riding being an exhilarating drive, it was simply a crawl.

It was rather a noticeable fact that the only three cars to finish the entire 1,570 mile tour which have not received penalization at one time or another are the Buffalo Pierces, Pierces and American Berlet, there being but one of the latter cars that finished this, its maiden trip, made a most lasting impression. The Pierce cars stood the test well and strong as proven by the fact that it was well represented in the two leading teams.

Praise for Tom Fetch.

There was one man on the tour who deserves no end of praise and that was Tom Fetch, who drove over 2,000 miles during the tour and in many instances lent a ready and willing hand to others at a time when it was most needed.

Perhaps one of the most unfortunate of the run was Mrs. Cuneo, who showed admirable perseverance and endeavored to overcome all obstacles. She was virtually forced out of the competition by a slight matter of accidents, and yet she finished in New York, and her remarks in the tour awarded to her the distinction of leading them through Broadway. And then at the meeting at the Astor last evening she was presented with a silver cup, the gift of the men on the tour, who took this means to show their admiration for an old sport who endeavors to overcome all difficulties.

Three machines are now under lock and key in the A. C. A. clubhouse awaiting the decision as to what they shall do to further prove their worth, and in order to prevent any work being done on the same. Two are those tied for the Hower Trophy and the third is the clean score Reo, which is to be driven to the Jamestown Exposition, before it is overhauled.

The Maxwell sealed bonnet car, which has been part and parcel of the tour since it finished its twenty-four hour race at Chicago, will also be sent to Jamestown before the race is finally broken. This seal was placed on the bonnet June 18, and will not be broken until absolutely necessary.

CHRISTY, BROKEN IN HEALTH, TO REST

NEW YORK, July 24.—Howard Chanler Christy, creator of the Christy Girl, broken in health, has laid aside brush and pencil, and within a few days will go into seclusion for six months or a year, in an obscure little hamlet in Ohio. Incidentally, Mr. Christy will ding aside about $1,000 a week.

SPOILS SYSTEM HINDERS MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

ACTIVITY OF POLITICAL PARTIES A GREAT SOURCE OF EVIL, SAYS FISHER.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Political conditions in the cities of the United States and Great Britain as they bear upon the question of municipal ownership and operation of public utilities are discussed by Professor Frank J. Goodnow, of Columbia University, and Walter L. Fisher, president of the Municipal Voters' League of Chicago, in reviews made public to-day by the National Civic Federation.

The review was made at the instance of the federation's committee on public ownership which recently completed an exhaustive investigation of the subject in cities of both America and Great Britain.

Influence of Politics.

Some of the results of these investigations already have been given to the public. In previous reviews, however, more attention has been devoted to the physical than to the political side of the question. It was for the purpose of showing the widely varying political conditions in British municipalities as compared with the cities of the United States that Messrs. Goodnow and Fisher undertook their task.

The reviewers are agreed that political conditions have a bearing on the success or failure of the municipal ownership idea. Just how important this bearing is, however, is a question upon which they are not entirely in accord.

Mr. Fisher takes the ground that no city is too weak or inefficient to undertake in some effective manner the management of its public utilities. He contends that public interest and public sentiment is all that is necessary to hold city governments in line and force the administrative officials of a community to do their duty. In this connection he points to the public school and park systems and the fire departments of American cities. He believes that public sentiment if properly aroused would have the same effect in the management of utilities.

Mr. Fisher decries what he terms the "perversion of the popular demand for a businesslike administration of American cities." He says that even if municipal government is "business," its sole object is not a money profit.

"Municipal ownership," says he, "seeks to supply certain essential requirements of city dwellers at the lowest cost consistent with the best service, but in such a manner that the result shall be most advantageous to the community as a whole."

Professor Goodnow finds that the government of British cities is far more favorable to the success of public ownership than is that of the cities of the United States.

"Because of its methods of conducting municipal administration," says Professor Goodnow, "Great Britain has conditions existing which are favorable to efficient management. They go far toward explaining the character of the service rendered by cities which have undertaken the management of certain public utilities."

Must Change Conditions.

He finds that the management of British cities is characterized not only by the degree of efficiency attained, but that it also is commonly free from even insinuations of graft or corruption on the part of public officials. It is his opinion, too, that the government of American cities is too complex and that there is too much politics. He believes that a considerable change must be made in the conditions of city governments in America before the municipal ownership policy can be successfully applied in this country.

Mr. Fisher in his review, which appears under the heading "The American Municipality," says: "The activity of laboriously organized political parties in the American government is a feature which characterizes our municipal system. Great evils have arisen out of this domination of American cities. The difficulty has been intensified by the presence of the spoils system in which office is treated as the legitimate asset of the party in power, and by the fact that the parties in control have been national parties, divided on national issues rather than upon local lines. These considerations have made it difficult to obtain a direct vote upon questions of local importance, and to secure efficient service from the successful party even if victorious upon the local issue, it should not be forgotten, however, that within recent years there has been a strong tendency away from the evils that the party system has inflicted upon the

SOUND DEATH KNELL OF OLD PARTIES NOW RULED BY MONOPOLY

T. L. HISGEN ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY

Scores Corporation Rule in Rousing Speech at Independence League Banquet.

HE OUTLINES THE ISSUES

SPRINGFIELD, July 25.—Thomas L. Hisgen, the guest of honor at the Independence League banquet held here last night, announced his candidacy for the league's nomination as Governor in the following speech:

It is with a deep feeling of appreciation that I have listened to the kind and encouraging remarks made by the gentleman who has just preceded me. I want to thank him from the fullness of my heart, as well as the consumers and merchants in Springfield and throughout the western part of the State who have so loyally stood by us in this grand good cause, and made it possible for us to continue this unequal fight against the most powerful monopoly the world has ever known.

Announces Candidacy.

It is with the assurance of the support of many members of the Independence League, a great number of Independent Democrats, and not a few of my friends in the Republican party who are in perfect sympathy with the cause that we represent that I take this opportunity to-night to announce that I am a candidate for the nomination of Governor on the Independence League ticket. Should I receive the honor of the nomination I can only say that I am not unmindful of the great responsibility that goes with it. I feel that there is much to be done, and for every man discharges his duty and performs our great issues honestly, fearlessly and conscientiously, we will roll up a vote for the Independence League that will make every politician and political boss throughout this Commonwealth, who are now chasing after a barrel of money, to sit up and take notice.

Never in the history of the grand old Commonwealth has there been a time when the people will be called upon to decide one way or the other important questions which, in my estimation, strikes the very foundation of our commercial welfare.

Three Great Issues.

I have in mind three distinct issues. First and foremost, the proposed railroad merger; second, a reciprocal demurrage law; and, third, anti-discrimination.

In order that there may be no misunderstanding between us on these important questions, I want to state my views as briefly as possible, and while I expect many to differ with me, yet the public will have the satisfaction of knowing just where I stand.

I want to say right here that I shall oppose with might and main the proposed merger of the New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Boston & Maine. My one single reason is that the New York, New Haven & Hartford road is controlled, in the interest of the Standard Oil company, by the same gang of financiers who have practically built up the 600 miles, two-thirds of the entire New England railroad mileage of the United States; and yet they want to increase their power by absorbing over the Boston & Maine, all form transportation facilities in the New England States.

A subsidiary of the New York, New Haven & Hartford road, as we have found it to exist, will not be out of place at this time.

Unfair Discrimination.

Up to last June, a year ago, the New York, New Haven & Hartford officials absolutely refused to pro-rate with the connecting roads reaching into the oil regions of Western Pennsylvania. So, in order that you may understand the nature of the practice, I will explain as well as I can that at that time the Independent oil refiners had a rate of only 5 cents per barrel. This rate was called the Boston rate, and it was the same in all parts in Massachusetts and throughout New England. This rate was granted by the government, but the New York, New Haven & Hartford road refused to live up to it in every particular, and just as soon as a shipment of independent oil reached any point on this great system, they would tack on in addition to the 5 cents per barrel another 5 cents per hundred their local rate, which made it absolutely impossible for the Independent refiners to compete in this territory. On the other hand, the Standard Oil Company, under this unfair discrimination in favor of the Standard Oil Company, the entire monopoly of the refined oil, and through this monopoly the Standard Oil Company has robbed the people throughout New England of hundreds and thousands of dollars, by charging exorbitant prices. Now, I want to quote from the report of the Federal Government, as made by James A. Garfield, which reads as follows: (The quotation is from Garfield's Chapter III. of Mr. Garfield's report.)

Hearst a Second Jefferson.

In connection with what I am about to quote from the Garfield report, the committee on general arrangements had hoped to have with us to-night one who has furnished the evidence against the various railroads, where such practices existed, during an unfair discrimination that finally caused the Government to intervene, and I am invited the first proceedings against the railroads and a fine of $29,240 was imposed.

The man that I have in mind is a second Thomas Jefferson, who, like Jefferson, was born in the South, and who, unlike many who are born into great wealth and live a life of ease and comfort, he has chosen to spend his valuable time for public good and through the powerful influence of his many great papers, that reach from the Atlantic to the Pacific to-day is leading the battle for the down-trodden.

His name has been that 10 per cent of the population can take care of themselves, but that 90 per cent needs a friend and that will protect them. While the great and good man may be with us to-night, yet his spirit is ever present, and way down deep in our hearts there is one for who has the cause of the poor people at heart, for him to look to for the good he has done. This man is William Randolph Hearst.

The Standard Oil Company for years has enjoyed a rate of 5 cents per barrel from New Haven & Hartford road to pro-rate, and a representative of the New York & New Haven system states that the Standard Oil Company refused to pay more than 5 cents per barrel, and yet to pro-rate."

Transportation "Dangers."

Called to account for this illegal discrimination, one of the railroad officials made the statement that the reason why they refused to pro-rate was that it was dangerous to transport kerosene oil over their road. But it seems a rather singular coincidence that the danger never appeared to them only when a sixty cent independent oil happened to be reached on their road.

Now, I hold here in my hand a letter from which I will quote. This is nothing more or less than a simple letter, written by one of our customers—never intended for any great campaign document—but there is no man living who can produce an argument that speaks louder and more plainly as to way this merger should not take place than what I am about to quote. This letter is of recent date—July 12th.

"Please ship me at once three barrels of kerosene oil, same specifications as in my very low on this and will say would get it on the way quickly. I could have it come from Norumbega only for the fact that it costs much more than from Springfield (as recorded on the Boston & Maine road. We first got barrels came from Springfield and cost $1.70. My last three barrels came from Northampton over the New York, New Haven & Hartford and cost $2.04. I presume the New Haven road saw a chance to squeeze us and we grant all use, and so did it. Better ship us the old from Springfield, if you can, as I do not want it to come over the New York, New Haven & Hartford road."

Gentlemen, I shall not take up your time in going further into this matter, but I will promise you that you shall hear from me long and often throughout this campaign.

Affects Merchants of State.

"Now, I will pass briefly on to the second issue, and I believe that it will interest every merchant throughout the State who has experienced the heavy payment of demurrage charges. The railroad today charges you one dollar a day for every car that is not unloaded at a certain time. We do not object to this charge so much, but the law that I have in view will work both ways. Every merchant who does a large business orders his supplies just about as fast as he can dispose of them, allowing time for the transportation. Say, for instance, a man has two cars a week to come along for an indefinite time, and the railroad company, through delay or otherwise, sends several weeks' shipments, and finally when the goods arrive, instead of having two cars he has eight or ten and he is unable, on account of lack of storage, to unload them at that time, and besides doing without these goods at a great sacrifice and loss to the merchant, he is compelled to pay a dollar a day for each car that stands on the track.

Now, gentlemen, this law, if it is passed, will make the railroad liable for one of a dollar a day for every car that they fail to deliver to the shipper after a certain liberal time has been allowed for transportation. This law has been passed in several States, and it has proved that it has done more to expedite, time and business than any other law.

Urges Anti-Discrimination Bill.

Now I will come to the last of the three issues, which is very dear to me, as I have devoted a great deal of study to this measure, called the anti-discrimination bill. While this will affect the whole community in general use, I speak more particularly of the real discrimination as practiced to-day by the Standard Oil Company.

To-day the Standard Oil Company retails its oil from house to house, and purchasers pay a dollar a gallon, and the wholesale price is from twenty-five to seven cents—and from that down to absolutely nothing.

Now it doesn't make one particle of difference to the Standard Oil Company. They could give every gallon of oil away to the customer in the territory which we occupy and they would only have made a paltry few cents on the entire transaction, and the consumer would be the gainer to the tune of our competition, and there is no other chance they have not to pay for the oil or do without. And this fails hardest on the middle classes and the poor people, for the rich man can afford to buy one barrel, and as well ask a family to do without bread or without light.

Our victory in the western part of the State of Massachusetts is only partially won—when you stop and realize that what benefit the people have received from our competition in Western Massachusetts and know that the people in the eastern part of the State must make up for this loss. We can name by consecutive figures that we are saving the consumers of Western Massachusetts a million dollars a year, and yet, as I said before, it does not affect the dividend of the Standard Oil Company by the least.

Killed by the Trust.

Now this law is intended to force the Standard Oil Company to sell its product at a uniform price throughout the State, the cost of transportation being considered. But as this law took away from them their most effective weapon to drive out competition, it is not necessary for me to say that it failed to pass.

Last December I called the attention of Governor Guild to this rank discrimination, I wrote him as briefly as possible, and went over the matter of this bill and the great good it would do in every nook and corner of this whole Commonwealth, and concluded my letter by saying that if he considered this bill of sufficient importance to call the attention of Massachusetts and would grant me an interview, I would be pleased to call upon him and go over the matter more thoroughly. In reply to this I received a letter from his secretary, stating the date for an appointment, and called on the Governor and presented facts and prices of the Standard Oil Company's monopoly, and his politeness prompted him how this bill had been of immense benefit to the people in the Western States where it had become a law. He promised to look into the matter, and no doubt did soon for we find a paragraph in his annual message to both houses advising legislation for these things.

Recalls a Patriotic Reply.

The bill was proposed and referred to the Mercantile Affairs Committee, where it lay was set for the seventh day of March. I attended this hearing with every hope of success. After presenting the case as well as I could there were a great many questions asked me by the committee, and one of those questions came from the Chairman of the House Committee, who stated in know if the Standard Oil Company should reduce the price of oil to seven cents throughout the State of Massachusetts I would have the supreme satisfaction of knowing that we had been the means of reducing the cost of the poor man's light from six to eight cents a gallon, and that would be enough glory to crown the balance of our lives, and we would gladly retire from the oil business and devote the balance of our time to the manufacture of axle grease.

This measure seemed so fair and honest and aimed to do so much good that, even considering all the money the Standard Oil Company could bring to bear to defeat this measure, I could not bring myself to believe that the lawmakers of this State would over dare to defeat this measure.

The measure is the one ambition of my life—to see it placed on the statute books, and I hope and pray this bill would be passed and to have dropped out of the political field entirely. But the Standard Oil Company has willed it otherwise, and just so long as this measure is not a law, just that long I will fight to the very last.

Thomas L. Hisgen Delivering Address In which he Announced Candidacy for Governor of Bay State.

Hisgen, in Stirring Appeal to Party, Announces Candidacy

It is with the assurance of the support of many members of the Independence League, a great number of independent Democrats, and not a few of my friends in the Republican party who are in perfect sympathy with the cause that we represent that I take his opportunity to-night to announce that I am a candidate for the nomination of Governor on the Independence League ticket. League's Mission to Stir the Individual

Economic conditions are disturbed, and we are drifting from the Americanism of our fathers. There is only one panacea, and that is to awaken the individual citizen to his own responsibility and the necessity of his personal interest in government. This is the mission of the league.—E. Gerry Brown at Independence League banquet.

NO BOSSES FOUND IN THE LEAGUE RANKS, 'TIS TRUE TO NAME

—W. N. OSGOOD.

Hon. William N. Osgood of Lowell, State President of the Independence League, spoke as follows:

"You have a candidate for Governor right here in Springfield who represents something. He represents a cause—the cause of real popular government, and not a pretended one. He is opposed to and is judged continuously to fight the enemies of the public and the friends of Whitney and Belmont. Such a man we have, a man who is courageous, and one who is willing to battle first for the nomination within our organization, for which there is a fair and open field for all contestants, and, if successful, is willing, we need not say to give up his seat, for he already has it, to do, but to go forth and continue his battle against the greatest financial power and commercial force which threatens the welfare of the entire people and the very stability of the republic itself.

"Such a candidate I expect, you have, and we have learned to admire him and respect his ability and his willingness, and sincerity, both as a private citizen and as a public servant in Boston. I commend to receive the nomination of our league for Governor, no doubt in a world conduct a campaign which for vigor and honesty of purpose would be a credit to the voters of the commonwealth as to bring success within his reach.

In Worthy of Honor.

This would certainly result, if the citizens became sufficiently awake to the dangers which threaten and to a full realization of what your fellow-citizen represents, in John L. Hisgen you have a man, a citizen and a prospective candidate for Governor of the historic commonwealth of Massachusetts whom you or the citizens of any other city may be proud indeed to honor.

"In a general way our league has already done good work in the past, and expects to do much more in the future. Future work—and I had hoped that this year would—and I had hoped that this year would—and I had hoped that we have brought for the purpose of political field entirely. But the Standard Oil Company has willed it otherwise, and just so long as this measure is not a law, just that long I will fight to the very last.

But the Standard Oil Company has willed it otherwise, and just so long as this measure is not a law, just that long I will fight to the very last.

"Now, gentlemen, this law, if it is passed, will make the railroad liable for one of a dollar a day for every car that they fail to deliver to the shipper after a certain liberal time has been allowed for transportation. This law has been passed in several States, and it has proved that it has done more to expedite, time and business than any other law.

Urges Anti-Discrimination Bill.

Now I will come to the last of the three issues, which is very dear to me, as I have devoted a great deal of study to this measure, called the anti-discrimination bill. While this will affect the whole community in general use, I speak more particularly of the real discrimination as practiced to-day by the Standard Oil Company.

To-day the Standard Oil Company retails its oil from house to house, and purchasers pay a dollar a gallon, and the wholesale price is from twenty-five to seven cents—and from that down to absolutely nothing.

Now it doesn't make one particle of difference to the Standard Oil Company. They could give every gallon of oil away to the customer in the territory which we occupy and they would only have made a paltry few cents on the entire transaction, and the consumer would be the gainer to the tune of our competition, and there is no other chance they have not to pay for the oil or do without. And this fails hardest on the middle classes and the poor people, for the rich man can afford to buy one barrel, and as well ask a family to do without bread or without light.

Our victory in the western part of the State of Massachusetts is only partially

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE GIVES HOPE TO TOILERS, DECLARES E. GERRY BROWN

E. Gerry Brown of Brockton, who made a notable run for Lieutenant-Governor last year, spoke as follows:

"We are enlisted as members or friends of the Independence League, an association organized under the laws of Massachusetts for educational work. We have also the political party known as the Independence League, because in the last election our efforts to awaken the people to a realization of existing conditions were recognized by an approving cross from each one of 35,853 voters on election day.

"I assume that the intention of the league from the educational standpoint is not to be affected by the number of crosses it may encounter, either at the polls or elsewhere, but that its work is now, as it has been from the beginning, to champion true democracy, and in this field it welcomes the co-operation of any man, whether in party or no party, of like aim.

Party Thirst for Power.

"Thirst for power has led great parties to adopt platforms safe to catch any breeze that might blow them to success, and now men of great ability can be found in either party who differ, as widely, as the party alignment itself, concerning what is the party doctrine. There is need of a readjustment in a national platform of true democracy as the expression of an overburdened people in the wilderness and seeking to be led out of bondage.

"True democracy exemplified in the practical affairs of government is the brotherhood of man, the ideal of our forefathers.

"We have not outgrown it; we have simply tried it. The best that can be said of that name tried to try it.

"One measure designed to awaken popular interest in government was the public opinion bill championed by organized labor and the Independence League. It was enforced in the Legislature at the command of the Republican party not only by nearly a unanimous Republican vote; they voted on the lawyer that men were made for government. It is to the credit of the Democratic Senators and Representatives that they were almost a unit in its favor; they voted as the Democratic Old governors was made for men. It should be an issue in this campaign.

Fights All Unjust Burdens.

"While an issue is being made of the railroad merger, it is timely to remember that the offenders in the plated Massachusetts in her present almost helpless condition were first the Republican officials who merged the State ownership of the Hoosac tunnel and the stock of the Albany Railroad into the private ownership of New York capital. The two highways in the West, built by the State and held in the possession of the State, were deliberately sold for a mess of pottage.

"I am opposed to all unjust burdens being laid upon the people with or without the consent of the people, and the legislators it upon favored individuals to create a monopoly, as they differ, as widely, as a junction. If it complains of the robbery, should be denounced by every good citizen, whatever his views may be on protection.

"I am for tariff reform and reciprocity. If others are this way to ably advocate trade rights with Canada, I can say amen, and if given an opportunity I will supplement it with a plea for the natural and inalienable rights in Massachusetts, which is all that labor demands."

NOTHING TO HOPE FROM PARTIES BOUND TO MONOPOLY LEADERS

—JOHN L. EDDY

John L. Eddy of Needham, Chairman of the State Executive Committee of the Independence League, spoke as follows:

It is by no mere accident that an industrial revolution and a political revolution occur at the same time. When the domination of trade upon which depends the welfare of a State or a nation falls into the hands of a few men who are banded together for their own private profit, new measures of public policy must be devised to meet the changed conditions which a few years ago the specter of Socialism first showed its ominous form in America. We shunned it then, as we fear it now. The issue of thought and use in solemn tones just the absence of competition would deprive men of the incentive to advance. In a single decade the very teachers who told us that competition was the foundation of our industrial well being have turned about, and they are now telling us with equal solemnity and with as little of final wisdom that competition is harmful and that we must destroy "trusts," because, removing competition, the Trusts can give us better service and at less cost.

Teachers of Monopoly.

The fathers who established our government believed in their times upon the maxim that competition is the life of trade. The Morgans, the Rockefellers and the Wilsons, who have debauched and corrupted our government, are unwilling us, by taxpayer and gamble, that monopoly is the inclosure of competition.

If that be not revolution, then I do not understand the meaning of the word.

Many have long since cornered the necessaries of life and forced the cost of living up more than 30 per cent, now they have bought our legislatures and appointed our judges and are undertaking to supply the very tools of politics.

Behind them their demonstrated control of the existing parties, they have had the audacity to tell the American people that the way to the people of New England

AUERBACH CHEERED AS HE VIGOROUSLY HITS OLD PARTIES

Junius T. Auerbach said:

"There is nothing mysterious about the Independence League movement. It simply is an expression of the desire of large numbers of people to get back to the Democracy of Jefferson, the rule of the people, so-called, and the Republicanism of Lincoln. The Independence League believes in the true Democracy and in the true Republicanism, and the trouble also been that those words have not for many years expressed either those principles or the people that stand for them. How many people in the Commonwealth go on voting for mere labels, forgetting the change in conditions and the change in the modern standard for the principles.

Feed at Public Crib.

"Look at the Republican party in the State to-day. What are they doing and what do they stand for in general? 'Are they not the protected manufacturers, the office holder, the people looking for undue advantage and special and exclusive privileges? Is he not the party for their Reform? Look at the Democratic mass. Is it anything else than the professional politician, the contractors seeking contracts, would-be office holders seeking to fill offices that are not needed, and a few wealthy men who believe that a change in the tariff policy of the government would be good for their business and who are the representatives, no less than the Republicans, of aggregations of capital avoiding litigation, seeking perpetuity at the expense of the citizens of the country, their wealth, and trying to avoid the making of laws for their regulation.

Governed by Commission.

"What is the word that you hear most in connection with either of these parties? Is it not the word machine? That vague something, some one who pulls the wires, directs, seeking its own advantage, and the people, powerful, are governed by the commission of merchants, of merchantmen grasped with money, and whose chief ability seems to be ability to get rich, and what are those goods? Are they not favors for privileged classes, the fruits of unjust laws, and the producing of bad ones, with the ally Joker Cannon, passed for their own elusive benefit? Do you hear anything about its working for the benefit of the people, for the curbing of the too powerful, and working independently for the general good? If it keeps on, in a few more years you will have a Czar in the White House, Aldrich Chief Justice, with a Supreme Court, Lawyers, Limited, with a more tax, taking elder than the Federal Supreme Court, with boards on certain streets.

HISGEN AND HEARST ARE CHEERED AT BIG BANQUET OF LEAGUE

SHEARN TELLS OF BIG BATTLES WON BY HEARST

Independence League Chief Has Always Labored for the Public Good.

THE CHAMPION OF LABOR

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 25.—Clarence J. Shearn of New York, who has been a the forefront of the battle against predatory trusts, aroused great enthusiasm in his address at the Independence League banquet. Mr. Shearn's mention of the names of Thomas L. Hisgen and William Randolph Hearst was greeted with great applause.

He said in part:

This is the first Independence League meeting that I have addressed outside the State of New York. If I read the signs of the times aright, it won't be the last.

It gratifies me that the first of such occasions is in dear old Massachusetts, and especially that it is at a meeting of the leagues of Western Massachusetts; for I was born and brought up in Hampshire county.

Of all the States in the Union, Massachusetts should offer fertile soil for the growth of this independent movement. A State, for so many years overwhelmingly Republican, that was independent enough and sagacious enough to elect three times William E. Russell Governor, is one where the fundamental principles of the Independence League will take deep root, for as people are coming generally to know, those principles are unalterable opposition to corporation control of the government and the abolition of every form of special privilege.

Successor of Russell.

Had William Russell lived, there would have been no need of an Independence League, for he typified its foundation principles, its best ideals, and he would have, as a party leader, as President of the United States, so exercised his influence upon our public life that at least one of the historic parties would be honestly and firmly committed to these simple but fundamental political principles and have the confidence of the people instead of being, as it is, an object of derision and in a state of decay.

But there is now battling for those same foundation principles, devoted to the cause of real popular government, sincerely desirous of promoting the general welfare, another quiet, unassuming ,modest gentleman, he who is galvanizing this independent movement into political life and effective activity—William Randolph Hearst.

Unselfish, Patriotic.

Democratic, genial, though personally diffident, a man for whom the term friendship has a real and sacred meaning, one whose consuming ambition, for which he discarded not only the temptations of wealth, but even personal comfort, is to accomplish some real good in the world and render the public and his country the service due from every son of genius, power and patriotism, he is nevertheless assailed as a selfish schemer.

Judge this remarkable man, my friends, not by what people say about him who are ignorant or malicious, but rather by the testimony of those who know him and by what he has done and attempted to do for the public good during the past fifteen years.

What the League Stands For.

The best efforts of the League are pledged to substitute for corporation control the rule of the majority and to secure to the people a better control over and a firmer grip upon their affairs. With the former purpose in view, the League is pledged by the system of direct nominations which will kill boss rule and restore real representative government, which is made a mockery by legislation called "direct primaries."

A practical and reasonable extension of the initiative and referendum will prevent the corrupt tampering of legislative bills demanded by the public and will safeguard public property and public rights. By bringing into general application the proper election of United States Senators and Judges, so that both those who make and those who execute the laws shall be chosen by the ballot as the choice of the people and not as now, respect subject to the control of corporations and special interests a step of vital importance will be taken.

This is why "all interest in politics at out time and is daily growing in importance as must be borne in upon the people by the spectacle on every hand of the nullification of legislation in the several States by Federal judges. While no fair minded man would attempt to deny any suitor whether individual or corporation, his day in court to assert a claim that property was being taken without due process of law, this matter of scientific "due" is a judgment of duly elected legislatures the judgment of a five or seven headed federal absentee judge, appointed often for political considerations, is a monstrous one of grave public importance, in view of the readiness of so many lawyers with or without mere assertions of unconstitutionality are accepted, in lieu of proof and in lieu of the presumption of constitutionality, and in view of the non-judicial manner in which legislation is nullified for years while longwinded litigation is wearisomely wending its way to the overburdened Supreme Court of the United States.

Public Ownership.

Believing that the private confiscation of public property should be just as rigidly punished as the due administration of law now properly prevents public confiscation of private property, the League demands that public property be administered on behalf of the public just as an honest trustee administers his trust property; and to this end the League advocates public ownership of such utilities as are monopolies, and the prohibition of franchises except for short terms and then and approved by popular vote in the locality affected.

Other objects aimed at by the league are fairer conditions for the farmer, the promotion of the welfare the prosperity of the nation depends, and bringing to a more general recognition of the reasonableness and fairness of the efforts of organized labor to secure fair wages and reasonable hours of labor. Intimately connected with the latter subject is the extension of the good roads system, prevalent in many States into a national system of roads, relief from unreasonable charges for transportation of the products of the farm to profitable markets and the establishment of postal savings banks and a parcels post.

Hand in hand with the demands of laboring men for fair wages and reasonable hours should go the prohibition of child labor and provision for trial by jury in contempt cases, both of which are demanded by the enlightened conscience of an undoubted majority of our people in every walk of life.

BOSTON STORES BRIGHT IN GAY DRESS FOR HOME WEEK

RECORD DISPLAY OF COLOR AND BUNTING MADE BY PATRIOTIC MERCHANTS.

With handsome banners, shields and pictorial pieces, Boston merchants are donning holiday dress for their buildings in the universal effort to please the eye of home-coming visitors and lend an inviting air to the whole decorations. Vieing with one another in the burst of welcome from their stores, the merchants are taking personal satisfaction in arranging their emporiums from the outside in the most appropriate manner possible.

Between now and Sunday the various large stores will have attained their full holiday attire, although many have secured a good start and are leading the pace in the competition in making the individual stores stand out among the more noteworthy in praise of the efforts of their owners.

Six-Story Store in Festive Array.

A. Shuman & Co., at Shuman's Corner, Washington and Summer streets, have arranged their six-story building in festive array. Large transparencies adorn the building on both Summer and Washington streets extending welcome to Boston's sons and daughters and reminding such and all that the latch string is out for the home-coming. Bright flags, bunting and Old Home Week colors help to make Shuman's corner easily one of the most tastefully dressed in the city.

The Jordan March big store on Washington street is draped with gray bunting, and flags and pictures of the Puritanical days will help to make this emporium a picturesque spectacle.

The James A. Houston Company, corner of Tremont place and Washington street, is ablaze with color, made up of flags and bunting, which set off the popular store very well.

The Henry Siegel Company has in place a handsome picture of the landing of the Pilgrims and a welcome to the visitors. Flags and gay bunting are neatly festooned from the windows and present a most spectacular effect.

C. E. Osgood will decorate appropriately with flags and bunting to keep pace with other merchants in taking honors for neatly dressed stores for Old Home Week.

Picture of Paul Revere.

Wolf the Clothier has decorated the large store at the corner of Washington and Hanover streets with pretty bunting and flags, together with a large picture of Paul Revere awakening the settlers.

Across the street in the F. Gray Company, which has embellished its store with handsome bunting and flags, with a mingling of Old Home Week streamers of official color—blue and green.

Gilchrist & Co.'s daylight store, Washington and Winter streets, is decorated from street floor to the top with flags and bunting and shields with numerous signs of welcome. No effort has been spared to make this store stand out among the large number of eager merchants to put on the best dress for the great festival.

Winter street merchants have rallied strong to the movement to make their stores shine during the Old Home Week, and from the subway at Park street as far as the eye can see Winter street is one mass of color. Shepard & Norwell have yards of pretty bunting, flags and ship's pennants adorning their store structure.

Perfect Color Blend.

Mark Cross & Co. on Summer street are showing off their store with a perfect blending of color with flags and streamers and richly colored bunting. E. T. Slattery, leather goods, will dress his store with a profusion of colored bunting and flags.

The Mercer Jonasson Company, corner of Boylston and Tremont streets, plan to decorate the building with a handsome show of color and electric lights. This store will prove one of the prettiest to be seen from the Common.

Vacuumleaners's hosiery store on Winter street is keeping pace with the rival stores there with a burst of bunting and flags and signs of welcome. Red bunting is used extensively. The L. Starr Company, also on Winter street, is not to be overlooked in the general praise for their efforts to make their store one of the most fetching in appearance in holiday dress. Here flags and bunting will make up a pleasing sight.

Conrad's store is set off with plenty of color in the shape of flags and bunting.

Large Flags in Window.

The Continental Clothing Company, corner of Boylston and Washington streets, are to dress their large building with large flags stretched from each window on palos. Old Home Week colored streamers will help to make the show satisfying.

The S. S. Pierce Company's big store on Tremont street will take on its full dress of flags and bunting. The Roughton & Dutton firm is planning on making their store dress take first prize among the stores to be decorated. Feature will be a floor sand electric light bulbs in various colors. This, together with hundreds of yards of bunting, draped tastefully from window to window and belayed along by hundreds of flags, promise to make this popular department store a dangerous rival for the first honors.

William H. Brine's store on Tremont street is dressed for the occasion with streamers, banners and flags in a way calculated to make their show noteworthy among the general array.

The W. B. Butler store on Tremont street will adorn their building with a handsome array of color and national flags, pretty festoons of flags and bunting will finish this decoration.

Historical Decoration.

Leopold Morse's store decorations deal with a sample of history which is bound to make a big hit with all who observe the store's dress. On Brattle street the building bears a long sign recalling the fact that the old Brattle Street Church once nearly occupied he site. The printed matter displays the fact that the church was built in 1699 and torn down in 1874 to make room for the growing city. This historical banner is set off with a fine collection of flags and bunting. From the Brattle street side, and covering the entire Washington street side are bunting and flags, which make the store a bond some sight.

R. H. White's big department store will be trimmed with bunting and flags, while as electrical display may be added.

And so on, through the long list of Boston's patriotic merchants there is an effort to put on the finest dress, display signs of welcome and make the hearts of the thousand home-comers glad at the show of beauty and spirit which will go far to make Old Home Week a conspicuous success.

OVER 200,000 TO VISIT BOSTON ON OLD HOME WEEK

More than 200,000 visitors, former residents of Boston and sightseers, are expected to be in Boston during Old Home Week. The passenger agents of the railroads say that the immense throng will start to pour into Boston by Saturday night.

More than 1,000 extra baggagemen, trainmen, guards and matrons have been engaged to help facilitate matters at the different railroad and boat terminals.

Because of the extremely low railroad and boat rates thousands of business men and sightseers will travel from all over the South and the North to Boston.

The fares from all parts of the country to Boston have been reduced about one-half. A person can travel from any point in the United States to Boston and return to their starting point for about what the fare would ordinarily be one way.

Below is a table showing the reductions in round-trip tickets to Boston from points north, south and west during Old Home Week:

	Regular round trip rates	Old Home Week rates
Indianapolis	$40.00	$22.00
Omaha	67.50	35.75
Milwaukee	51.00	27.00
Chicago	44.00	24.00
St. Louis	51.50	27.75
Buffalo	19.00	11.95
Pittsburg	20.00	15.00
Cleveland	28.80	16.40
Troy, N. Y.	7.60	3.80
Saratoga, N. Y.	16.20	8.20
Concord, N. H.	3.00	3.00
Montpelier, Vt.	12.14	10.14

NURSES WILL LINE ROUTE OF BIG CIVIC HOME WEEK MARCH

During the big civic and trades parades next Wednesday morning, cases of prostration are likely to occur along the line of march if the weather is at all distressing. Lieutenant-General Nelson A. Miles, who is to be chief marshal of the parade, requests that any business houses along the route of parade who are willing to loan a small amount of their store space for emergency hospital work inform him by letter as soon as possible. Communications may be addressed to him at the Old Home Week headquarters, room 1055, 1 South building. If the business houses will give the space, the Red Cross Association will furnish the nurses.

LONG DRIVE AT 92.

BANGOR, Me., July 25.—Among those who attended the recent race meeting in this city was James S. Dillaway of Stockton Springs, who on July 4 was ninety-two years old, and he was as much the smart appearing as any seventy-year-old rube grounds. He drove from Stockton Springs, the thirty-mile ride not tiring him at all.

CINCINNATI ELKS WIN $250.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 25.—The Elks Committee on awards announces that the Cincinnati Lodge won the first prize of $250 for registering the greatest number of ladies at the reunion here last week. Brooklyn was second and Buffalo third.

BLOWS STRUCK, LIE GIVEN IN LEGISLATURE

ATLANTA, Ga., July 25.—"You're a liar."

These words, heatedly uttered by Representative Seaborn Wrigat of Floyd county, brought the climax of one of the wildest scenes ever witnessed in the halls of the Georgia legislature. The epithet was directed at Representative Joe Hill Hall of Bibb county, the leader of the Gilbreath house which was still in progress when the trouble occured. Mr. Wright is the leader of the Prohibition forces. Like a flash the two men were at each other's throats and got in several blows before friends could separate them.

As soon as the house had quieted down a bit, Representative Candler of Dekalb county moved an adjournment, explaining that the house was in no frame of mind for the consideration of the Prohibition bill nor any other measure. It was carried without even an aye and nay vote.

The personal difficulty between Mr. Hall and Mr. Wright was preceded by one of the most disgraceful scenes ever pulled off in the halls of any legislature, and is likely to result in the expulsion of ladies from the gallery as well as all who are not members of the body.

The trouble began with a motion that the house suspend all rules and put the Prohibition bill on its passage.

GIVE CROMER A PENSION.

LONDON, July 25.—In the House of Commons Premier Campbell-Bannerman presented a royal message proposing a special grant of $250,000 to Lord Cromer, who recently resigned the post of British agent and consul-general in Egypt, in recognition of his services to that country.

70, WEDS 52 AFTER MERRY LICENSE HUNT

Widower, Three Score and Ten, Would Not Brook Delay of a Day.

CEREMONY AT MIDNIGHT

Special to the Boston American.

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., July 25.—After a frantic five-hour search for a city clerk, a marriage license and a clergyman, seventy-year old Benjamin Treen, a wealthy widower of Mansfield, Mass., and fifty-two year old Mrs. Ella McCartney, a widow of that same town, succeeded in getting married.

Mrs. McCartney came here yesterday afternoon and called on relatives, pending the arrival of Treen. The latter arrived here at 6 p. m. He had carefully taken out a Mansfield marriage license. He was disconcerted to learn that he couldn't wed in Central Falls, R. I., on a Mansfield, Mass., license.

Search City for Clerk.

Some belligerents might have postponed the wedding than baited no late in the day. Not on Treen. With all the energy of twenty-five the enthusiastic bridegroom started to locate City Clerk Fred Crawford. After a four-hour search Treen established the fact that Crawford was out of town for the night.

It was then 10 o'clock at night. Not discouraged a whit, Treen said he would take the assistant city clerk if he couldn't get the senior official. There was an hour's hurry and scurry about town, with much telephoning. At 11 p. m. Treen found that Assistant City Clerk Crawford M. Fairbanks was participating in an early-season rally of the Lincoln Republican Club. Treen was driven to the club. He sent up for Fairbanks.

After hearing the story of this hunt for a license Fairbanks could not see his way to disoblige Treen, late as it was. Fairbanks went down to City Hall, opened his office and issued a marriage license.

Having gone so far into the matter Fairbanks thought he might as well see it through.

"See here," said Fairbanks to Treen, "you come up to my house with Mrs. McCartney. I'll get a clergyman. I'll wake up Mrs. Fairbanks for a witness and you can be married at my home."

This they went to Fairbanks's home on Summit avenue. Fairbanks telephoned around the clerical neighborhood and finally reached the Marked Crank Rector, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Pawtucket. The Rector of his duty clear. He dressed himself and took the next trolley car to Central Falls, and at midnight the ceremony was performed.

The Way to Make A Happy Success of Your Dinner Party

AVOID making the dinner too long—that is a great mistake. Let there be only one fish, two soups, if you like, but one is quite usual, one entree, and only two never three—sweets, in fact, cut down quantity and think of quality.

With regard to the decoration of the table, have real flowers, arranged as naturally as possible, and avoid those that are too strongly scented, because there are people quickly overpowered with strong scents, and a scene at a dinner table is disastrous.

Never let an inexperienced cook attempt French entrees—it is fatal.

Either have no entree at all or choose something plain and simple that any cook can do. For instance, lamb cutlets and green peas is as good as good can be, and can be done by any one who can cook at all; but make a rule to order what you want to test her capacity at new dishes, try her when you are alone and not when you have friends.

Have a Novelty

THEN try to get something fresh—something just a little out of the common—to give your guests. This is not difficult. It pleases them and gives a subject for conversation. It may be that it is only a salad—but how interesting a salad may be!

It may be made of lovely crisp lettuce, or of walnuts and bananas, of celery and apples and walnuts or of oranges and chestnuts—in fact, an ingenious person can make a salad of anything!

Of course, you must ask the people who have been civil to you and who have invited you, but try to bring some outside element into your party, for whether in town or the country it is sure to be a dull dinner party if the same set of people meet the same set over and over again, so if you know people who are entertaining or amusing, ask them, and so make your party more lively.

Of course, the hostess has to take in the guest of the evening, whether he be sixteen or sixty. Equally, of course, the host leads the way down to dinner and the lady of the house follows after all her guests.

The other guests are sorted out according to their suitability.

The few minutes that must pass before dinner must be occupied by the hostess in introducing people and keeping the guests amused.

Must Keep Busy

AT dinner the hostess must avoid giving any hints or orders to the servants. If she has to say anything let her say it aloud, and never whisper it; but if servants, through ignorance or neglect, make a mistake, let it pass.

At dinner do not be too much occupied with your neighbor, no matter how charming he may be, for as hostess it is your duty to lead the general conversation into pleasant lines and avoid painful and unpleasant subjects; to make the silent speak and break in, with tact, upon the man or woman who tries to usurp the whole attention or conversation to the exclusion of the others.

Indeed, the part of hostess is no sinecure.

After dinner a hostess is again busy. She must move from one to another, she must get some one to sing, some to play cards and all to be happy and amused. And this is not easy.

What Is Your Best Preserving Recipe?

THIS is the season of the year when the thrifty housekeeper is busy with her preserves and jellies for the Winter.

Very soon, too, tomatoes will be in the market and then will come the task of "putting up" countless goodies in the shape of catsups and pickles and sauces for days to come.

The BOSTON AMERICAN wants to publish the choicest canning and preserving recipes of New England housewives.

Have you just finished with your straw berry preserves? And are you getting ready to start on your currant jelly or some other goody for the long days to come?

Are you famous with neighbors or friends for the daintiness or flavor of your one of your preserves? If so, pass the secret of your success along to other housewives.

The writer of every recipe printed will receive free a copy of the BOSTON AMERICAN'S Economy Cook Book, a splendid blank book of 120 pages, especially adapted for the preservation of choice recipes clipped from this page.

It is bound in heavy oilcloth to withstand the wear and tear of constant kitchen use, and is indexed so heavy ruled writing paper for your own recipes.

Many hundreds of these books have been sent free by the Economy Editor to contributors of recipes, and hundreds of letters of approval have been received.

"The best what I have used for years," is the verdict of delighted housewives. Send in your choicest canning and preserving and jelly and pickling recipes and you may be one of the thrifty housekeepers to address Economy Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston.

DRY STEW

BOIL one pound of beef in one quart of salted water slowly, until done; take it out and keep it hot, being the liquor in the stewpan; into this put an onion and one turnip, cut up in small pieces with pepper to taste; after turnips have boiled 15 minutes add three potatoes sliced and cut in halves lengthwise; lay some dumplings in a strainer over these to cook; when potatoes are done remove to separate dishes and thicken the liquor left in kettle for gravy.

No. 263 Washington avenue, Chelsea.

SUMMER SAUSAGE

CHOP bits of cold steak very fine; add to this an equal quantity of cracker dust. To about two full cups add one tablespoon of flour, salt, pepper and sage to taste; moisten with boiling water to about the same as sausage meat. Make into flat cakes and fry in butter.

M. L. HILL.

APPLE MARMALADE

PEEL, quarter and core a large panful of tart apples; cover with water and cook till very soft; squeeze the juice and pulp through a thin jelly bag; weigh and allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of pulp. Add a little gelatine dissolved in water and let it all steadily until twenty minutes.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

MAY BE JEALOUS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of nineteen, and am a stenographer in an office in State street and earning twenty-five dollars a week. While on my vacation last Summer I met a girl to whom I asked my friend to introduce me. I received the introduction, and since then our friendship developed into love. My father likes her, and mother does not seem to care for her. The only thing that I can see why the mother don't care for her is her height. She is small for her age, which is seventeen years, and you tell me what to do, as my mother is all the time talking to me about getting taller girls and that I shouldn't think of marrying for, as I am too young. ANXIOUS.

PERHAPS your mother envy be a little bit jealous—mothers often are. It will pass away after a while when she sees that you are in earnest. I am glad that you are sensible enough to wait a while before marrying. It is much better to wait until you are a few years older.

SHALL HE WAIT?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-two years of age, and am going to high school, and nobody can deny the fact that a young lady five years my senior. Would like to know what you think of the following: Should I become engaged to a young lady and wait until I become a teacher?

L. L.

I WOULD advise you not to wait until you are in a position to marry the young lady before you propose to her. As you are a school girl, it seems to me it would be very foolish to bind either her or your self for so long a period.

NEAT RIBBON GIRDLES EASILY MADE AT HOME

THE simplest sort of a muslin dress can be made to look quite smart and fresh with the addition of a neatly made girdle of pretty bright colored or flowered ribbon.

Any woman with clever fingers can make herself a great variety of these and wear them alternately with her muslin dresses.

The first girdle is of soft liberty silk lined with a narrow velvet ribbon, the long ends trimmed with three rows of the velvet.

Next is a crush girdle of flowered ribbon lined at the back, where it fastens with stiff loops standing well up and several ends cut in long points, hanging about three-quarters of a yard below the waist.

A girdle without ends is desired a pretty way to finish it is with two rows of rosettes forming a point at the back and in the middle of the front.

To make these crush girdles stand erect two bones starting together at the bottom and spreading at the top is a simple method, with a bone on each side of the opening at the back.

THE upper left-hand picture shows a girdle of ribbon edged with narrow velvet.

The large picture is a crushed girdle with many loops and sash ends.

In the centre is a girdle with trimming of rosettes.

The lower drawing illustrates how to bone a ribbon girdle.

"WITH me," he answered, "it is the philosophy of perpetual good age, but you have no excuse. With you it must be sheer callousness. You are in an evil way, Lady Caroom. Do have some of these quails."

"You are very rude," she answered, "and extremely unsympathetic. But I will have another quail."

"I do not want to destroy your appetite, Mr. Brooks," Lady Sybil said, "but this is—if not a farewell feast, something like it."

He looked at her with sudden interest.

"You are going away?" he exclaimed.

"Very soon," she assented. "We were so comfortable at Enton, and the hunting has been so good, that we cut out one of our visits. Mamma developed a convenient attack of influenza, but our host is almost tired of us."

Lord Arranmore was for a moment silent.

"You have made Enton," he said, "inhospitable for a solitary man. When you go, I go."

"I wish you could say whither instead of when," Lady Caroom answered. "How bored you would be at Redcliffe. It is really the most outlandish place we go to."

"Why ever do we go, mamma?" Sybil asked. "Last year I nearly cried my eyes out. I never do. Not a soul to talk to or a horse fit to ride. The girls bicycle and Lord Redcliffe bounds cattle and talks turnips."

"And they are drink port after dinner," Lady Caroom moaned; "but we have to go, dear. We must give our two first weeks during these months to get through the season."

Sybil looked at Brooks with laughter in her eyes.

"Terrible People"

"Aren't you terrible people?" she whispered. "You are by way of being literary, aren't you? You should write an article on the shifts of the aristocracy. Mamma and I could supply you with all the material. The real trouble, of course, is that I don't marry."

"Fancy glorying in your failure," Lady Caroom said, complacently. "Three seasons, Arranmore, have I had to drag that girl around. I've washed my hands of her now. She must look after herself. A girl who refuses one of the richest young men in England because she likes his face or hers is incorrigible."

"It was not his collars, mother," Sybil objected. "It was his neck. He was a—ways called the Giraffe. He had no head and all neck—the most fatuous person, too, I hate feeling."

"That is where you lack education, dear," Lady Caroom answered. "A fool is the most useful person—for a husband."

Sybil glanced toward Brooks with a little sigh, and, catching a glimpse of his expression, burst out laughing.

"Mother, you must really not let your tongue run away with you. Mr. Brooks is believing every word you say. You needn't be embarrassed, Mr. Brooks—or dentone. Mother and I quite appreciate the fact, but we're really very fond of one another—for our station in life."

Lady Caroom gave such a delightfully easy way of remaining," Brooks said, Sybil nodded.

"It's quite true," she answered, "she ought to write the prospectuses for gold mines and things."

Arranmore smiled across the table at Brooks.

"This," he said, "is what I have had to endure for the last six weeks. Do you wonder that I am getting bolder, or that I set all my people to work night and day and find some one to suffer with me?"

"Hardly one so dull when we've gone," Lady Caroom sighed.

"You've not been now we've improved him," Sybil murmured. "He used to read Owen Meredith after dinner and go to sleep. By the bye, where are you going when we leave Enton?"

Lord Arranmore hesitated.

"Well, I really am not sure," he said, "you have alarmed me. Don't go."

"My dear man," she said, "we must! I daresay you prefer Redcliffe to Enton true, and hell never let me overdraw a penny unless I'm civil to him. If I were you I should go to the Riviera. We'll lend you our villa—getting at Easter. It will be empty for a year."

"Come and see me, hostess," he said, "I promise you that I will not hesitate then."

She shook her head toward Sybil.

"How can I marry that down there?" she demanded. "No young men who are really respectable go abroad at this time of the year. They are all hunting or shooting. The Riviera is thronged with roues and invalids and adventurers, and we don't know any of them. Dear me, what an excellent a grown-up daughter does entail. This coming season shall be your last, Sybil. I won't drag you round again. I'm really getting ashamed of you."

"Isn't she dreadful?" Sybil murmured to Brooks. "I hope you will come to Enton before we leave."

"It is very kind of you, Lady Sybil," Brooks said, "but you must remember that I am not like most of the men you meet. I have to work hard, especially just now."

"And if I were you I would be thankful for it," Lady Caroom said, "from my point of view, at any rate, there is nothing so interesting in a man as the fact that he is a worker. Sport is an excellent thing, but I detest young men who do nothing else but shoot and hunt and loaf about. It seems to me a country-house where work creates it. All the same, I hope you will find an opportunity to come to Enton and say good-by to us."

Farewells

Brooks was suddenly conscious that it would be no pleasant thing to say good-by to Lady Sybil. He had never known any other like her, so perfectly frank and girlish, and yet with character enough underneath in her rare moments of seriousness. More than ever he was struck with the wonderful likeness between mother and daughter.

"I will come at any time I am asked," he answered, quietly, "but I am sorry that you are going."

They had finished supper and had drawn their chairs around the fire. Arranmore was smoking a cigarette and Brooks took one from his case. The carriage was ordered in a quarter of an hour. Brooks found that he and Sybil were a little apart from the others.

"Do you know, I am sorry, too," she declared. "Of course, it has been much quieter at Enton than most of the houses we go to, and we only came at first, I think, because many years ago my mother and Lord Arranmore were great friends, and she fancied that he was shutting himself up too much. But I have enjoyed it very much indeed."

He looked at her curiously. He was trying to appreciate what a life of refined pleasure which she must really live would be like, and the hedging—whether its limitations ever asserted themselves. Sybil was a more than ordinarily pretty girl, but her face was as smooth as a child's. The look of weariness seemed to be always in her eyes. Yet there were times, as he knew, when she was capable of keenness.

"I am glad," he said, "Lord Arranmore will miss you."

A Challenge

She laughed at him, her eyebrows raised, a challenge in her bright eyes.

"May I add that I also shall?" he whispered.

"You may," she answered. "In fact, I expected it. I am not sure that I did not ask for it. And that reminds me. I want you to do me a favor, if you will."

"Anything I can do for you," he answered, "you know will give me pleasure."

She laughed softly.

The Boston American Pattern

A Dainty Negligee

No. 5,830—The graceful dressing sacque shown in the illustration is decidedly pretty and has the added attraction of comfort, as small Turks in front and back are stitched to retain depth. The use of the belt makes the garment to fit any dress. It is plaited around the waist, holding the fulness in place in the back in the usual way and then passed through rings cut in each front and fastened underneath. The three-quarter sleeves hang free at the lower edge, flowing about the hand, and the collar completes the neck. Cream white challis trimmed with a band of the same material in polka dot design was used for the making, but French flannel, lawn and china silk may all be used with good results. For 36-inch bust measure 4 yards of 36-inch material will be required.

No. 5,830—Sizes for 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure.

To obtain this pattern, postpaid, send 10 cents, with size, name and address, to the BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass., allowing one week for delivery.

Saturday Is Last Day of the Bright Sayings Contest

"SPLITTING hairs is easy work compared to judging Boston ladies to find the most beautiful one," said one of the artists of the jury in whose charge has been given the photographs in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN prize baby contest.

And for that reason, and for several other similar and equally important reasons, the announcement of the prize winner of the $500 Beauty Contest will be made in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN of August 4 will give away eleven hundred dollars in prizes for beauty and brains.

Don't forget that the Bright Sayings Contest positively closes at midnight on July 27.

No bright sayings received after that date will be considered.

But here are some already in the race:

GREAT PLENTY

One of these recent very hot days I was at the beach with my five-year-old son Russell. He heard a man near by say, "That fellow should cut off too much his air."

Looking up at me and fanning his flushed little face, he said, "I hope, mamma, that fellow won't come shooting hot air around here, for I think we've had enough of it."

FOR KEEPS!

The other morning I was curling my little boy's hair. He is three and a half years old, and he was speaking of a married woman, calling her by her first name of Nellie, said to him, "Charlie, her name is Mrs. Blank now. Her husband's name is Charlie, like yours."

And he looked at me and said, "Oh, mamma, did Aunt Nellie buy him to keep?"

MRS. MARY HOWARD.

ENVIED THE CAT

Our little Arthur, five years old, was dressing himself one morning to go to school. Each morning the neighboring cat, Ben, comes to see him.

This morning school seemed a greater burden than usual, so he began talking to Ben.

"Oh, Ben," he said, "you don't have to put on your clothes in the morning. All you got to be is a cat, and Mrs. Ben don't have any shoes to lace, either, and Ben, you don't have to go to school. Oh, I wish I was a cat."

HIS LAST WALK

My little girl Evelyn is one year and eleven months old. Her grandpa brought a toy with a leg of tape, and when grandma opened it, she found that the foot and the small part of the leg were in the bundle. To amuse Evelyn he walked it across the table.

Evelyn looked at it very soberly and said: "Poor little lambie! He is taking his last walk."

MRS. ALBERT L. WELLMAN.
11 Arlington street, Reading.

WISE BABY

Little Alice, who was two years and ten months, was given twenty-five cents by her uncle. When she went to take her nap in the afternoon I took the money from her so she wouldn't lose it.

After she awoke I gave her five cents and put the quarter in her bank. She looked at both sides of the five-cent piece and said: "This is not my monies, mamma. Mine had a crow with wings on it, and I could see stars on him."

MRS. T. MURPHY.
No. 20 Sands street, Cambridge.

WHY HE WAS SYMPATHETIC

I was talking to my little boys, three and four years old, about a neighbor who had just died. The elder one seemed very sad, but Everett was inclined to feel like laughing, so I reprimanded him, and told him that he ought to be ashamed to laugh when his brother William and I were feeling so sad about Mr. B.

I then went on talking about his being put in the ground, etc., determining to make him see the sad side.

After awhile he became really sober and thoughtful, and I thought my talk had had the desired effect, when he suddenly said:

"Ma, I'll tell you what does make me sad, though, to think I've got to go there." And that was all the sympathy I extracted for Mr. B.

Man's Economy vs. A Woman's Thrift

IF the necessity for cutting down expenses were thrust upon us to-morrow, how many of us would be able to take action? Would we know just where to cut, with the least discomfort? I doubt it. Probably we would do a number of foolish things that would prove expensive in the end.

Surely it is rank folly to try to cut down the list of comforts until the trimming in other directions has been completed. We need heat in cold weather, we need clothing suited to the season. Surely we need comfortable beds and plain, nourishing food, whatever else we may dispense with.

There used to be a list of queer economies practiced by women, but it has not been seen for some time. You could never imagine a woman deliberately doing any of the things by which money was expected to be saved.

No dress for comfort and no amount of persuasion will force them to the wearing of garments that constrict the body in any manner.

Occasionally a careless man finds himself with a pair of tight shoes, but he soon wears them to the end of their usefulness.

Women look at their aching feet set their jaws and sacrifice comfort to beauty. They wear tight corsets and high collars, all because fashion orders them.

Girls spend their money instead of breaking in new shoes that were too small for them, and then borrow from a friend with a smaller foot to be put through the stretching process.

A man's idea of economy is to buy what he needs when he has the money and go without it when money is lacking. He sees no reason why a woman should not be sensible at all events.

Some women have spells of thrift, or what they regard as such, and during those times they practice economies so common they look for cheapness. Wearing quality is not understood here, and when that is overlooked there is no economy.

Handy Things for Housewives to Know

BRASS candlesticks that are in constant use should be rubbed up every week. To remove the wax without scratching or injuring the brass, plunge the candlesticks into a pan of very hot water and allow them to remain immersed long enough for the wax to melt. Another simple and effective method is to heat the candlesticks in the oven, allowing the wax as it becomes soft with tissue paper or rag.

* * *

Velvet odds and ends should never be thrown away, as a hundred-and-one uses can be found for them in the kitchen. In the kitchen range has been blackened and brushed, it is rubbed over with a piece of velvet, it will greatly improve the brilliancy of the polish. Old velvet is also splendid for polishing footwear and brass.

To raise the pile of velvet pass the wrong side quickly over the top of a vessel filled with boiling water and then over a very hot iron. To remove the wax without scratching or injuring the velvet, especially if it be black or a dark color, rub with this treatment look almost as good as new.

* * *

Shabby black bedsteads will not only look smart, but will wear much better if appearance, if rubbed over with a cloth dipped in paraffine.

* * *

A mouthful of salted water held in the mouth for a few minutes after the extraction of a tooth is recommended by an authority as a preventive of secondary rhage.

* * *

Sad irons which have become rusted may be brightened again by rubbing with emery paper. If the rust is very persistent, dip with oil, let it stand and a day or two later rub again with the emery paper.

TOMORROW'S BEST BARGAINS IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

A VARIETY of offerings with moderate prices attached to them will render the task of the Friday shopper an easy one:

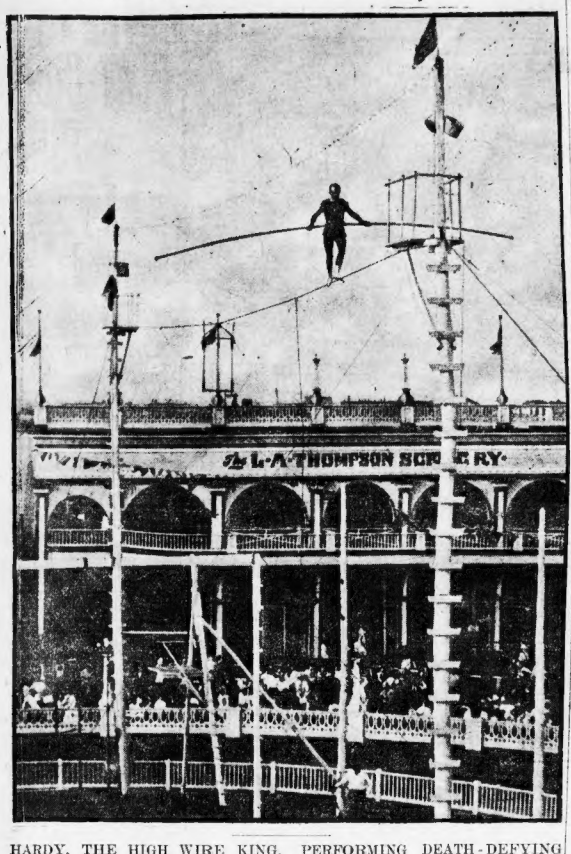
Dances on Wire Tied in a Bag 50 Feet Over Heads of Crowd



HARDY, THE HIGH WIRE KING, PERFORMING DEATH-DEFYING AERIAL STUNT AT WONDERLAND.

He walks a slack wire with baskets on his feet.

He performs on a wire fifty feet in the air tied in a bag.

He rides a bicycle across the gap on a wire half a hundred feet above the heads of the crowd.

These are a few of the things done by the high wire marvel, James E. Hardy, performing afternoon and evening at Wonderland. Hardy dances upon his wire, does a disrobing act midway on the wire and performs upon a trapeze suspended from it.

Hardy is the acknowledged king of high wire performers of the world. He has been exploited in all the principal European cities and was engaged six weeks ago to perform in Wonderland. At the beginning of his engagement he was thrown from his wire in a high wind, sustaining a severe shock and other minor injuries, since which time he has been recuperating under the care of Dr. Ook, at the Woodland Hospital.

Now he is as well as ever and has fully recovered his superb nerve. Daily he may be seen, upon the high wire, stretched across the arena at Wonderland, in an exhibition lasting twenty minutes.

Next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN will publish for Old Home Week a double coupon for admission to Wonderland park, so that two persons can enter Wonderland with coupons clipped from one paper.

RECORD BREAKING COUPON ARMY AT REVERE RESORT

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Revere Beach and Wonderland will be filled by a greater number of people than any corresponding three days of the season. This was largely due to the SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon plan.

The Regua Rider Hippodrome, Palace Merry-Go-Round, and Thrill Rider Hurlers were busy every minute, afternoon and evening. For those with seven other attractions there will be coupons published next Sunday. The others are Fairyland Theatre, Mystic Hill, Roller Coaster, The Sire Company, Musical Railway, Automobile Race and Rollaway Skating Rink.

For cars free to Canobie Lake Park, next SUNDAY'S AMERICAN will publish coupons entitling holders to visit the theatre, where "The Pretty Persian," is played; the Merry-Go-Round, House of Mirth and Laughing Gallery.

Large comfortable trolley cars leave Canobie Lake Park every half hour for Nashua, Lowell, Lawrence and Haverhill and plenty of extra cars are put on by Manager Woodman to accommodate the crowds.

At Lexington Park one of the aims of Manager Benson is to keep the grooves free from rubbish. The woodland is sufficiently open to see all about the park and shade, so as to protect visitors from the hot sun. With its cozy nooks, rustic seats, animal preserves and other amusements the park is unexcelled for family parties. Next Sunday's AMERICAN will publish another coupon admission to the park inside of which most everything is free.

HIGHWAY BOARD SHIELDS EXPERT IN 'PHONE HEARING

Whitman Refuses to Question Witness Blood After His Refusal to Answer.

"I have served notice that next Wednesday I will demand further facts about the padded pay rolls and phantom workmen who don't work," announced Attorney Whitman to-day, concerning the adjourned telephone hearing of yesterday.

The absolute refusal of a witness to answer a question asked by Attorney Whitman and the refusal of the attorney to further question the witness, after Chairman McClintock announced his standing to be perfectly satisfactory to the board, were the sensational features of yesterday's continued attempt of the Highway Commissioners to cover up the alleged padding of the telephone company.

The affair was called by courtesy a "hearing," and was full of exciting comments, as the company, called by the commission, fought tooth by tooth all attempts to throw more light on its internal workings.

Chairman Shields Financiers.

"I refuse to question the witness further," exclaimed Attorney Whitman for the petitioners of the Boston Post in the dramatic finale of the hearing, in which he was attacking the words of expert William H. Blood, Jr.'s figures.

"You are employed by Stone & Webster, whom I had supposed to be the largest producers of water in the community." Here Chairman McClintock of the board made a vain effort to keep the name of Kidder, Peabody & Co. out of the discussion by a strenuous objection.

"His experience for ten years has been by this firm. Their entire force has been colored by the firm's doing," continued the attorney.

"The commission is satisfied with the character of his experience," interposed Chairman McClintock, struggling again to assist the company in keeping financial operations a dark secret.

"Do you know the financial connection between Stone & Webster and Kidder, Peabody & Co?" asked Attorney Whitman of Expert Blood.

Refuses to Answer.

"I refuse to answer," was the sensational reply of the witness.

"It is clear to see," said Mr. Whitman, "that there is a very close connection between Kidder, Peabody & Company and Stone & Webster. I have stated that the commission made a mistake in selecting Stone & Webster, experts. Their figures don't reach the situation the commission ought to consider."

"The commission is perfectly satisfied with the engineer," said Mr. McClintock.

"If the commission takes this view I refuse to question further," retorted Attorney Whitman.

The discussion was started by a sensational confession on the part of the expert, who admitted a huge discrepancy in his own figures. He found on his first report that the total physical valuation of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company was nearly $34,000,000. After more investigation, with officials of the company, the expert admitted he changed his mind and the report at the same time, and made the total valuation approximately $23,000,000, with a valuation of the Boston and suburban district estimated at $17,000,000.

Hello Girl Problem.

In order that there may be no m The "hello girl" in all her whims was seriously considered by the commission earlier in the day. Irwin O. Wright, the general superintendent of the company, described the qualifications of the ideal telephone girl, who, he was compelled to admit, was hard to find and still harder to keep.

"Low wages have no material bearing on their inefficiency," was his startling statement, after confessing that for the very hardest kind of work the girls only received from $5.50 to $10 per week.

Attorney Whitman attempted to wring from Purchasing Agent Nathan N. Libbie the fact that the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company purchased the greater part of its supplies from the Western Electric Company, controlled by the Bell Company, instead of submitting the business to open competition. This was partially admitted.

Auditor Longley, who spent part of the day on the stand, admitted that the company had 300 different rates and that the company did not know whether or not it was making money on certain branches of the service.

It was also brought out that certain fortunate hotel guests were offered just one half the toll rates to their homes. This auditor explained this as being "merely a coincidence" and "a clerical error."

The fact that Kidder Peabody & Company furnished the company with confidential over $2,000,000 on notes in less than ten days was brought out, but the auditor denied that he knew where the firm got the money. In fact, he said he had heard that the notes were scattered all over the State. The hearing adjourned until next Wednesday at 10 a. m.

IDEAL HELLO GIRL PAID $5.50 A WEEK

Is the "Hello Girl" on your phone line one of Superintendent Wright's ideal telephone girls? If she is she has—

A quick and active hearing.
An alert mind.
Strong, athletic body.
Clear enunciation.
Genial and sunny disposition.

If she is all of this and works nine hours a day the Telephone Company will pay her $5.50 a week, and, maybe, when she has worked years and years, and then some more years, perhaps the company will advance her to ten whole big dollars a week.

Anty Drudge is Progressive.

Mrs. Halfwise—"I'd like to use a gas stove, but I need so much hot water for washing and scrubbing."

Anty Drudge—"My dear woman! Are you progressive enough to use a gas range and still wash and scrub with hot water and old-fashioned soaps? Don't you know that with Fels-Naptha you can do all your washing and cleaning in cold or lukewarm water, do it easier and better than with hot water?"

Every woman knows what a nuisance a hot fire is on a summer's day. Fels-Naptha is a double blessing:

It not only does the washing easier and better, but it cleans the clothes in cold or lukewarm water without a grilling fire to boil them. No over-heated kitchen; no nauseating steam; no putting your hands into hot water to roughen and redden them.

Add to this advantage the saving of time, labor, fuel and clothes, and you have some idea why women who have once washed with Fels-Naptha will have no other soap.

But you must wash the Fels-Naptha way in cold or lukewarm water; never boil the clothes or use boiling water.

When you unwrap a cake of Fels-Naptha, pin the wrapper on the wall in your laundry, and follow the plainly printed directions.

Be sure it is a red and green wrapper.

SAY CHILDREN SHOULD WEAR NO CLOTHING

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, July 25.—Frederick Starr of the University of Chicago let loose yesterday another of those amazing utterances by which the educators of that institution keep in the limelight. He said:

"Children should wear no clothing until they are ten years of age.

"I mean, not a stitch of clothing. This is right on both physiological and moral grounds."

Professor Starr's words attracted especial attention because of an announcement made that several university professors are to experiment on the "family problem," in specially constructed "paradise flats" at Fifty-sixth street and Lexington avenue.

There was much speculation as to how Professor Starr's theories would be applied to the residential "Utopia," which will be built at a cost of more than $50,000.

GIRL RUNAWAY BROUGHT HOME, SEEKS DEATH

Protesting that she still loves the man for whom she left home, and her disdain that he is married, Dorothy Nichols of Hingham, the sixteen-year-old girl who was detained by the police of Buffalo, N. Y., while on her way to meet Charles L. Penfield in South Dakota, and who was brought home by her grandfather, John W. Nichols, threatens to end her life unless she is allowed to go and find her lover.

The story told by the girl to her grandfather is incoherent. She is suffering from nervous shock due to the excitement. While seated at supper last night she snatched up a carving knife and tried its edge, declaring that she would not live until the morning. Her family is watching over the girl carefully, and all instruments that might be used as weapons have been concealed.

Yesterday the Nichols family received a letter from a woman in Hartford, Ct., who claimed to be the wife of Charles L. Penfield. The woman said that Penfield had three children whom he came to see occasionally, although husband and wife had been separated for six or seven years.

HUNT FOR $200 BURIED SUNDAY AT NANTASKET

Nearly $200 Worth of Paragon Park Tickets Also Await Lucky Finders.

"Where did you get that fine coat of tan, Bailey?"

"Down at the beach in the AMERICAN gold hunt—it's the greatest fun in the world. You can't keep down when you find one of the gold pieces or a string of the tickets, why you get a good breath of the sea and a thick coat of tan like mine."

"When is the next one?"

"Sunday, at Paragon Park and Nantasket. Let's both go. It's one of the finest beaches in the world."

Mabel was right. The next gold hunt of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will be next Sunday at Paragon Park and Nantasket. It will be the most interesting of all the series so far, as will be disclosed to those who purchase next SUNDAY'S AMERICAN and read the thrilling chapters of the Buried Treasure story.

This much may be said now—there will be $200 in gold hidden in thirty places and nearly $200 worth of tickets admitting the finders to all attractions of Paragon Park.

How to find this gold and the tickets will be told in the next SUNDAY AMERICAN so clearly that every one will have a fine chance. There will be 150 tickets and thirty chances at the gold.

The gold pieces will be in $5, $10 and $20 pieces. You may get any one of them.

It is great fun digging in the sand, searching under benches and scouring the whole beach for the treasure.

SUNDAY'S AMERICAN will tell all about it and give you the necessary information to get your share of the money and tickets.

OFFERED TO BEHEAD PRISONERS FOR GUEST

BANGOR, July 25.—George F. West of Portland, who recently returned from a trip to Japan and China, saw while in China forty men confined in prison who were alleged to be pirates. In the opinion of Mr. West they were really smugglers. They were all condemned to die, but the date of the execution had been set some time ahead. An official with whom Mr. West talked was anxious to please his American guest in every possible way, and he offered to order the prisoners to be immediately beheaded if he desired to witness the execution. Mr. West declined with thanks.

"I Suffered Agony from Gall-Stones.

Now I Am Cured."

"FOR a long time I suffered agony from a terrible case of Gall-Stones. Nothing gave me relief but Mi-o-na, which is a wonder and a marvel.

"My family were seriously considering an operation to save my life when I determined to try Appendicitis. I took it according to directions, and the second day brought me immense relief. After that I rapidly recovered until now I say God bless the man who invented Appendicitis. It certainly is a glorious success and does all it claims. It certainly will keep the doctor from getting people sick.

"I feel like a new person and feel that my experience will benefit others who suffer as I did. To all such I would say: take Appendicitis at once.

"WARMER AND FAIR" TOMORROW

Fair and warmer again is the weather prospect.

The local forecast is:

"Fair to-night and Friday. Light southerly to westerly winds."

This means that the temperature, which was quite reasonable yesterday, is to ascend again. No abnormally hot days are expected immediately, however.

The shift in the winds to the south'ard brings corresponding rise in the mercury. If this southerly wind stays with us it will undoubtedly bring a renewal of distressing weather for Old Home Week.

Umpire—O'Loughlin.

With a double-header on the tapis today there will be a great crowd out to the links, weather permitting, to see the Detroit Tigers line up against the Bostons again. George Winter is down to pitch the first game, which begins at 2 o'clock, and he says he thinks he can trim the hustlers from the Michigan city. Probably may go against the visitors in the second contest.

A few more games like that of yesterday and the baseball populace of Boston will become delicious. As a matter of fact more than one nervous fan made a rush for the nearest bologna as soon as Tannehill sent in the winning run and proceeded to get deliriously happy right away.

Powder Tannehill, himself, had dark circles under his eyes as he walked off the field. He had been pitching great ball up to the ninth, when the Tigers broke from their cages and ate up his curves as fast as they were served up. Before ten could say Jack Robinson the woes was tied and things looked like more runs for Detroit, when Wagner put an end to the ball-fest with a sensational double-play, taking a liner from the bat of Payne with one hand and throwing to first in time to retire the side.

Wagner's Corking Triple.

Then Wagner started off in Boston's half of the ninth with a terrific liner between Jones and Crawford that was good for three bases; and after Criger had popped to Schaefer, Tannehill drove in the winning run with a safe liner to right.

Wild Bill Donovan lipped a cog when he put one over the plate for Powder. He had the southpaw in for two fouls and one ball and he might have bushed another ball on such a strong hitter as Jesse.

But Wild Bill took a serious slant at Bat.

Silk O'Loughlin made his first appearance this season on the Boston grounds and it must be confessed he got in bad with the crowd. Silk is one of the best umpire and the way he keeps the game a-going makes a hit with the fans. But he has his off days with the other umpires and yesterday he was not quite up to the standard. All his edicts were in favor of the Bostons and the crowd gave him thunder for what they considered his bad decisions against the Tigers.

Jennings Banished.

O'Loughlin was all to the good on balls and strikes, but some of his base decisions did not please the Tigers and they set up a terrible howl toward the last of the game. Jennings was sent to the bench for back talk and when he came out on the field to make another kick he was told to get off the grounds, which he did with the speed of cold molasses.

Later Captain Bill O'Loughlin was put out of the game and this made necessary a shift in the Detroit line of battle. "Dutch" Schaefer went to second base and Downs was moved over to third in the last inning.

It was a hot old game from start to finish—a regular old-timer—one that will not be repeated for many a day.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Tannehill had great control. He only passed one man.

But that pass started all the trouble. It was in the ninth and the bases filled on Wagner's error tied up the score.

Wagner came near losing the game when he let Cobb's grounder get by him. There was a fine chance for a double play.

However, the little shortstop redeemed himself a moment later by starting a sensational double play.

Tannehill drove in the winning run in the ninth and then slid and ran to first until some of the Boston players dragged him there. The Detroiters, who were somewhat rattled, rushed up to O'Loughlin and finally ejected that Tannehill was out for not running. Even now, Tannehill would only have made two out and Wagner had already scored the winning tally.

Wild Bill Donovan has had a State's prison hair cut and looks real rakish.

Barrett fielded his position to perfection. His great throw to Knight robbed Payne of a three-bagger in the third.

Cobb made a great catch of Tannehill's long fly to right in the seventh. The hit looked good for three bases.

Hugh Duffy saw the game from the grand stand. The Providence club had a day off.

Jennings's coaching is still worth the price of admission. No town mowers are needed when he comes to town, as he puts up all the grass in his neighborhood.

Mrs. "Silk" O'Loughlin is in Boston with her husband. She saw the game yesterday.

Wagner had a busy day with four putouts and four assists.

Bob Unglaub found a pocketbook on the train coming from Windsor Locks and says the owner can have it by proving property.

Sam Crawford is still there with the stick. He counted two singles and a two-bagger.

Unglaub got in three singles, scoring the first run of the game with his safety in the opening inning.

AL RAY ENTERED IN MAINE RACES

Interest in the maintine races at Rockdale Park, Peabody, Me., Saturday, under the auspices of the Lynn Gentlemen's Driving Club, is heightened by the entry of Al Ray (2:13¾), the well-known Boston speedway pacer, recently purchased by Elias Phillips, jr., of Swampscott, of the wealthy Phillips family. Mr. Phillips will pit Al Ray against Lady Laurin (2:13¾), and some of the best pacers owned by the club members.

JOE FOGLER IN BIG RACE AT BEACH OVAL

There will be a good card of bike racing at the Revere track next Saturday night with a twenty-five mile event as the feature.

Elmer Collins of Lynn, Hugh MacLean and Joe Fogler will make up the trio to test their speed in the paced battle and all are chock full of confidence over the result.

It will be the first time this season that Fogler, the six-day champion, has been seen behind pace, but the hero of the week grinds is no novice chasing the motors, as he has won races abroad where the sport is much more dangerous with the powerful motors in use. He is a most faithful trainer, is riding in fine form, as he proved when he was the sixth mere from our best professionals last Saturday night.

Another great race is a matched affair between George Wiley and Patsy Logan for ten miles with pace.

Wiley is a product of the great Jimmy Michael and became famous in the pace game when he won prizes in the Pan-American championships. He was a partner of Galvin in the last six-day race and has made a hit on every track where he has raced.

Besides the two pace races there will be a couple of events for the amateurs to fight out.

SULLIVAN WINS OVER THOMPSON

OGDEN, Utah, July 25.—Peter Sullivan of Lowell, Mass., won an exhibition over Cyclone Johnnie Thompson of Chicago after twenty rounds of vicious fighting last night at the Glenwood saucer track and thereby proved himself worthy of recognition. This same Thompson boy has made Fighting Jack Hyland and several other good boxing stars extend themselves to keep his pace and it looked much in the West as one of the roughest of the lightweights. The boys met at catchweights, about 135 pounds each.

NEW RECORDS IN IN RIFLE SHOOT

WAKEFIELD, July 25.—At the Bay State Range in the competition of the New England military rifle tournament yesterday all records at this range were broken, clean scores being made by Sergeant-Major Huddleston, Sergeant Berg and Sergeant Baptist of the Massachusetts State team at 500 yards.

IMPERIALS SHUT OUT DEFENDERS

In a well-played game at Franklin Field yesterday, the Imperials of this city defeated the Defenders of Springfield by a score of 3 to 0. The game was won by the local team chiefly through the effective pitching of Sol Saboska, the former Western League star, who held the visitors down to three hits and struck out seventeen men.

KEELER HAS GREAT RECORD FOR STICKWORK

There is no doubt that Wee Willie Keeler, the diminutive right fielder of the New York Highlanders, whose appearance at the bat has been the occasion of much trembling on the part of the opposing pitchers, has missed the stride this year. Willie has fallen away off. If Willie's slump is the eventual one which comes to every ball player some day or other if he remains in the game long enough his past entitles him to more praise than falls to the lot of the average player.

Just a word about Willie's work. He has a grand batting average of .357 for fourteen years he has not failed to hit for over .300. He has led the National League twice in batting. The best percentage he ever compiled was when he was with Baltimore in the National League. He hit for .432 that year. An other year he batted for .392.

Keeler's average statistics since 1896 follow:

BIG HONORS FOR HALL BROTHERS AT READVILLE

It was the Hall brothers who were all in the cheese at the matinee of the Gentlemen's Driving Club at Readville, and Arnold was runner in the bounds.

First Frank Hall surprised everybody by taking Class B, with Lexington over Minky O'Dreamwold, Alondra and Haynes. It has been said all along that the sleek little gelding would quit when collared, and in a class with such fleet stuff might lend to the head of the housetrench, but didn't figure in the wire he would certainly drop back to trailing.

However, he did nothing of the kind, as when his opponents came to him at the distance a chirk from his driver was all that was necessary for him to handily open out a clean length, and finish going easily.

In the next heat they went after him hammer and tongs, and like the previous trip the efforts were useless, though he was compelled to trot in 2:15. There is no doubt that hitched to a sulky and a regulation weight driver up he can step a mile in 2:12.

George Hall's distinction came in winning a four-heat battle with Dividend over Dreamwold Tower-Keeper and The Keepsake. The final heat, too, was the fastest in the event, and through it Hall handled his mare with the best of judgment.

Arnold Lawson galloped his laurels by being first with Maid O'Dreamwold, and second with his two other trotters, Mack Mark, 2:08, trotted his mile against time in 2:10¾, the last half in 1:05, and quarter in 32 seconds. George Hall took Benjamin Pope's place behind The Minute Man, and had a walkover in 2:20¾, the last half in 1:07¾. Charles Sanders made his debut with Ace Nor, formerly known as Dreamwold Brownie's Imp. Summary:

CLASS B, TROTTING.

Lexington, b. g., F. G. Hall	1	1	1
Minky O'Dreamwold, b. m., Arnold Lawson	2	2	2
Haynes	3	3	3
Time—2:10½, 2:12.

CHANGES MADE IN PROGRAM AT DETROIT MEET

DETROIT, July 25.—When a thunder storm burst shortly before noon and it became evident that there could be no racing scheduled over the Grosse Point course, the horsemen transferred the scene of activities to the location under the grand stand where Silver Bill Riley and his assistants hold forth. A few pools were sold on the 2:08 pace in which John A. touted as Geers's best pacer, brought even money against the field. Then the horsemen turned their attention to the M. and M. race on the very first pace and throughout the day, Sonoma Girl sold a heavy favorite.

Evidently the news of Highhill's lameness is taken seriously by the bettors, for after the sale of the favorite, which always took place without a bit of delay, the bidders were forced to increasingly slow to come to the support of the tiers trotter. The second pool sold over a very fair line on the proceedings of the entire afternoon. In it Sonoma Girl brought $225; Highhill, $140; Cluty Latus, $50; Sallie Fogg and Johnny, $20 each; Ken neth Mac and Beatrice Bellini, $10 each, and the field, comprised of Marjorie Margaret O. and Tooling Chimes $8.

The prospects are that the race will be trotted over a very heavy track. The rain yesterday was slow. It was further deadened by a rain in the early morning, but this would not have stopped the racing as the horses were working on it up to the time of the drizzle during the noon hour, which transformed it into a veritable quagmire. At one time the entire track was a sheet of water in front of the stand and those here in no doubt of a real deluge being such as to permit of racing today and avoiding the present drying weather continues, it cannot help but be dusty three or four days.

A change of program has been announced by Secretary Moore. The twelve events for the card will be run off after one each day remaining. Today will see the 2:08 pace, the M. and M. race and the 2:15 pace and the 2:10 trot. On Friday there will be the 2:12 trot, the 2:08 pace, the 2:08 trot and the Chamber of Commerce consolation. On Saturday the program will conclude with the 2:10 pace, the M. and M. consolation, the 2:06 pace and the 2:12 trot.

N. E. LEAGUE RESULTS.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, July 25.—This afternoon the Doves will open their second Western engagement with the Cubs.

The Boston team is bent upon wreaking revenge on the local team for the three straight defeats recently administered. Although the Cubs took the entire series, each game was won by the narrowest of margins, and a little luck on their side would have given any one of the games to the Doves.

Manager Tenney is confident that his men will make a better showing in the West this time than they did on the home grounds, and will be playing some, as on their trip in Dukes played as well as any of the Eastern team.

Manager Tenney wants his team to get back sixth place, which the Dodgers stole from them, and to this end the team will work might and main to bring about this end.

Vive Lindaman will probably face the locals today, while Carl Lundgren will probably work for the locals.

THINK THIS OVER
Ever notice a man pull his money out of his pocket, count it, and, finding a dollar missing, stop to think how, when and where he lost the bill? In the same way as some business men grew older they count their customers and find that one by one many of them have slipped away.
Knowing this, I have guarded against it, and I have made it my purpose to care for the wants of every customer I ever had. On this policy I have in five years built the biggest tailoring business in the country—a business that is yet growing greater. I have not lost my customers one by one, but have added to them thousands every year. Doesn't it convince you that I give the values I advertise?

BUREAU BIG FEATURE OF HOME WEEK

Boston American Will Help Find Long Lost Friends and Give Other Information

BROTHER SEEKS BROTHER

Are you coming to Boston to spend Old Home Week? Are any of your friends coming here to revive the old days and to meet their friends?

Are you anxious to meet a former friend if he comes here on Old Home Week? Are you a stranger in Boston and want to find certain things about the city? Are you a former Boston resident and want to find certain friends, but don't know where they live?

You can get the information you want in any of these cases by addressing

THE BOSTON AMERICAN POST OFFICE AND INFORMATION BUREAU,

No. 30 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

If you are going to be in Boston during Old Home Week and want your friends to know of it and yet don't know how to reach them, the BOSTON AMERICAN'S Information Bureau will make this easy for you. It will bring old friends together and will enable anyone to renew former acquaintances.

A City Directory.

If you have been away from here for years and forget just how to get around, the BOSTON AMERICAN'S Bureau will make this easy for you. It will find addresses for friends and locate their residences and tell the stranger how to go there.

It will look for anxious persons where their friends are. Here is an example. Hundreds of just such letters are arriving, and they will meet with proper answers. The letter follows:

Where Is Barney McGinness?

BOSTON AMERICAN Bureau:

I would like to get information concerning my brother, Barney McGinness. He was living in the western part of this State some years ago, I think it was at Palmer, Mass. As I have not seen nor heard from him for a long time, I thought it just possible that he might be in Boston during Old Home Week. If so, I will think that he knows where I live, and if he comes here I want him to meet me. He is my youngest brother. His sister and I have long wished to see him.

JAMES M'GINNESS.

No. 2 Milford street, Roxbury.

Now the Boston American Information Bureau will use all of its many resources to help these brothers to meet in Boston Old Home week, provided that Barney McGinness is in this city then.

It will do the same for any other brother or sister who is unknown to many relatives who they think may be in the city Old Home Week. It will address letters addressed to former friends but whose addresses are not known. It will make the stranger's visit here more pleasant, for it will supply him with any sort of information he may seek.

PARAGON BABY ELEPHANT NOW SCORNS OFFER

Springfield's $600 for the Children's Pet Is Far Too Low.

SEEK PARK ATTRACTION

The mischievous baby elephant at Boston's Animal Arena in Paragon Park, Nantasket Park Commissioner Hermann Buchsis of Springfield expects to get a clever baby elephant, well-trained and of respectable antecedents for anything like $600, he has made an elephantine error in more senses than one.

The Paragon Park elephant declines to admit himself on the open market for sale. Said that as Animal Trust has conferred all the available elephants and is holding them for a rise in price.

But one wise guy from trunk to feminine scorn when anyone talks of Commissioner Buchsis's effort to buy up a choice elephant for anything like $600.

Seeks Elephant for Park.

It seems that Commissioner Buchsis has been coveting a baby elephant for Forest Park in Springfield to amuse the school children. He heard he could get one for $600. The municipality raised that amount. With the $600 in his trousers pocket Mr. Buchsis started out to find an elephant market.

It didn't come out the way he expected. Instead of receiving a flood of offers from circus managers anxious to sell him choice pachyderms at rock-bottom prices, he found that all people having elephants were out looking for more.

Finally he wrote to Bostock's Coney Island headquarters, asking for quotations on the latest thing in baby elephants. Mr. Bostock wrote back that he had just the thing—a small female elephant of lovely disposition and very tractable withal, for the ridiculously low price of $2,500.

Bostock Cuts Off $750.

After a spell of surprise Mr. Buchsis wrote back to Boston that he was going to write to Lockhart, the London animal trainer, and as if to couldn't do better. He thought Lockhart would meet his $600 limit. He also told Bostock how the school children had raised the funds in hopes of getting a pet. This brought a reply from Bostock, as follows:

"Coney Island, July 20, 1907.

"Herman Buchsis, Esq., 275 Main street, Springfield, Mass.

"Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your letter of July 17. You evidently were mistaken when you say that Mr. Lockhart was prepared to sell you a baby elephant at $600. This could not possibly have been so, for elephants never get down to any such price. Inasmuch as you seem to say that it is the school children that are supposed to raise the money, they should be willing under these circumstances to help you out and not be stingy and am willing to make the price $2,500. Hoping this will meet your view, I am,

"Very respectfully,

(Signed) "BOSTOCK."

There the matter rests to date.

HOME REALTY COMPANY BOOKS ARE MISSING

Assignee Finds Condition of Affairs Don't Agree with Representations.

HUNTING LOSS LEDGERS

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 25.—Edwin O. Chase, treasurer of the Home Realty Company, is trying to locate additional account books of the company which do not seem to have been turned over to him for examination.

From the entries, which appear on the few books in his hands there seem to be discrepancies between what was represented to the creditors at their first meeting and the actual condition of affairs. Colonel F. H. Quinn, counsel for Burrows & Keegan, the assignees, have held their first conference yesterday to look over what books had been turned in to Mr. Chase. After a two hours' examination Colonel Quinn gave out a statement in part as follows:

Few Books Turned Over.

"What first surprised us was that so few books were turned over to the assignee, who was told, so he says, that he had been given all there were. The cash books are kept from November 1904. The journal runs from July 1, 1902, and the last entry was made December 1, 1904.

"There is another ledger which bears the date of June 30, 1907, but this is a special one and has to do only with the personal property contracts with the Home Realty Company.

Bank a Creditor.

"In the list of assets and liabilities which was read to the creditors of the Home Realty Company at their first meeting, there appears an item which declares that the Central Trust Company is a creditor of the Home Realty Company to the amount of $192,860. The books of the Home Realty Company show, as late as June 30, 1907, unsecured notes of the bank of the Central Trust Company aggregating $17,856.

"If the statement which was made to the creditors at their first meeting is correct, namely, that the Home Realty Company is indebted to the Central Trust Company in the sum of $192,80, then there must have been paid to the Central Trust Company by the Home Realty Company since June 30, 1907, a credit of that amount, which, however, is impossible. $16,957.20. This is on the presumption that the item on the book is properly entered.

Mrs. Eddy's Health and Fortune

The Health Is Good. The Fortune Should Be Left to Her

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, who discovered Christian Science, and who has spread her belief practically all over the earth, is at present the central figure in a lawsuit. This lawsuit seeks to take from her the control of her property and of her person, on the ground that she has not sufficient mind to take care of herself or her fortune.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine for August, which has just been published, contains an interview with Mrs. Eddy.

This interview, while written in rather a dull fashion, gives a simple statement of facts as to Mrs. Eddy's health and appearance, besides quoting what she has to say in regard to her lawsuit and other matters.

Mrs. Eddy in her interview complains very justly that nobody seemed at all interested in her or her health WHEN SHE HAD NO MONEY. This seems to be a fairly good reply to the effort to get her money away from her.

This lady of eighty-six years would doubtless be left quite peaceful in her old age, quite free from the delicate attentions of "next friends," if there were no accumulated fortune and no accumulated power to arouse the next friends' interest.

Mrs. Eddy, as a matter of fact, is a woman of extraordinary force of will and mind, considering her great age. Even among women much younger than herself, few possess her energy and mental vigor. She is fortunate, as a leader of a new faith, in being able to point to herself as proof of the value of her teachings.

Christian Scientists and others who read the Cosmopolitan's interview with Mrs. Eddy will reach the conclusion that it took a great force to do the work that she has done, and that the force still persists, in spite of the eighty-six years and the vigorous attacks by "next friends."

Can We MAKE People Admire and Love Us?

Optimistic Dorothy Dix Reveals Unconsciously Man's Ideals

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

This important question is answered to-day by Dorothy Dix in another column. You will read Dorothy Dix's article, of course, whether you read this or not. Dorothy Dix has brains, as have many women. She has sympathy and eloquence, as have many women. She has wit; not all women have it.

Dorothy Dix answers in the affirmative the question of our reader who wanted to know if he could MAKE people admire and love him.

Miss Dix says, "Yes, you can, if you go about it the right way." That is the substance of her extremely interesting statement.

She goes on to say, "How do we make money? By supplying a long-felt want."

And then she encourages us to believe that if we can make money by supplying a long-felt want; we can make somebody love us by supplying a long-felt want also.

We are compelled to disagree with the optimistic philosopher, Miss Dix. The world is filled with long-felt wants. When you supply them you may get polite thanks, but don't think that you will often get affection.

For instance, take the man with dyspepsia, nervousness and all the other evils of a poor digestion.

Good cooking, wisely selected food, are certainly his long-felt wants. Let a good cook supply all this, restore his health, give him the digestion of an ostrich, do you know what he will do? He will fasten his gaze and affection on some foolish, fluffy young person that could hardly cook a hard-boiled egg. And the woman who has been supplying the long-felt want and repairing his digestion will find that you can't make a man love you by cooking for him or mending his clothes, or by any other way except by BEING the kind of thing that he likes.

We dislike to speak discouragingly on this very vital question as to the possibility of COMPELLING affection. But our readers are entitled to the truth.

The truth is that back of affection or love there lies the deepest plan of nature. That is a plan FOR IMPROVING THE HUMAN RACE.

Every human being is compelled to like the person that possesses the qualities that he LACKS. Every human being is impelled by a force stronger than any other, a force of which he is unconscious, in the direction of the human being that makes up for his shortcomings.

Nature is determined to produce a human type that shall contain all of the good qualities. And therefore in marriage, which is the result of affection, contrasts are constantly brought together, and generation after generation of children improves, because each parent has supplied something that the other lacked.

You can cook for a man, scrub for him, wash for him, educate him, give him ambition, help him to succeed, and despite the best of intentions he will fix his affection on some goose who happens to possess some quality that he hasn't got.

This is a very sad subject. But it is necessary to discuss it. It is interesting to know that three wonderful women—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Dorothy Dix and Beatrice Fairfax—all feel the same about it. They are all optimistic. They all think it is perfectly simple to make an individual love you if you only try hard enough.

Men perhaps do not realize what that means. It means that you can't discourage women. It means that men are very lucky animals.

Here are three wise women that ought to know everything. But there is one thing they don't know.

Women go on trying and persevering and being patient to the end of the chapter. Truly, men should be grateful to that optimistic character of women.

If you put a marble in a bottle and give the bottle to a tame coon, it will wear itself to a shadow and finally go insane trying to scratch the marble out of the bottle. Its patience is pathetic.

But that patience of the coon is absolutely nothing at all compared with the poor, striving woman who keeps on trying right to the edge of the grave, right to the day of her own funeral, to do the thing which cold-blooded reason tells her is impossible.

Lucky is man that woman is made as she is, ever hopeful, patient, long-suffering. Lucky especially is he that a being of her intelligence and superiority should think of such a second-rate thing as himself at all.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

No doubt you are following up the dollar-a-line stuff which the Drapers of Hopedale are running to a number of Massachusetts papers without advertising marks.

NOT UNDER THE LAW AS IT NOW STANDS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Does not the public have the right to walk along the seashore? On the hypothesis that they have that right, and the continuity of the shore is broken by a large jutting cliff, have they not the right by virtue of easement to walk around the cliff? For certainly the early colonists must have walked around it whenever they went up or down the shore. And their descendants followed in their footsteps.

The arrogance of certain people at the North Shore in attempting to exclude the public from the magnificent view of the ocean which can be obtained there, even going to the extent of setting dogs on anyone who wishes in an innocent way to walk along the shore and enjoy this view is to my mind an illegal usurpation of power. Is there no remedy for this extreme selfishness?

Fakeless Fiction!

By Wex Jones

IT was about 11 o'clock (by specially regulated chronometer) on a bright (see weather bureau records) July morning that I was walking along a country road near Newton. (I was knocked down by an auto bearing number 282828 Mass., and the chauffeur may remember the incident and corroborate my statement.)

I was greatly surprised to see a large Irish setter (see photograph and pedigree in appendix) come running across the road, pursued by a ferocious specimen of the Canadian mouse (Mus ferox).

I know the Canadian mouse to be a dangerous animal (see appendix for affidavits by Rev. Wood Rambler, Dr. Forceps, Chiefs Big Toe, Cross Eye, Trot-in-the-Pace and Softsoled Ezra) and I have seen it with one bite kill a piece of cheese (affidavit Nos. 4-1-483), but never had I seen such a formidable brute as the present one. He squealed viciously as he ran (phonograph record No. 1) and the Irish setter became almost paralyzed from fear.

How to help the setter? I looked hastily around and saw a mouse hole (diagram 6). Quickly I chased the setter into the hole and the baffled mouse was unable to follow him. With a snarl of defeated rage the ferocious brute bought a single ticket to the South Station (see affidavit of ticket seller) and jumped aboard the train (statements of train crew on pp. 580-673).

Seizing the setter by the tail I pulled him back upon the road, when I noticed a farmer's wife approaching with a big stick and a basketful of eggs.

She shook the stick at the cowering dog, and I asked her the reason. (Phonographic record No. 3.)

"Sure," said she, "I bought him because they told me he was a setter, but when I put him on the eggs divil a bit will he set at all." (Authenticated by Mark Twain, Jerome K. Jerome and Jesters' Union, Local 00.)

Slowly (I traveled by the Boston & Albany) and sadly I returned to the city and went home, to find that the mouse had taken a terrible revenge.

It had eaten the full sets of affidavits, diagrams and photographs for five of my best stories, which are now rendered useless.

Can We Make People Admire and Love Us?

By Dorothy Dix

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

A CORRESPONDENT propounds the following interesting query to the AMERICAN:

"Can we MAKE people admire and love us who are indifferent to us or who dislike or hate us?"

There seems to be but one answer to this question, and that is an optimistic one. We can alter the mental attitude of others toward us. We can win love as surely as we can lose it. We can change cold indifference into warm affection and even turn hatred into liking.

Love is the greatest thing in the world, but there is nothing else concerning which we are so ignorant or cherish so many superstitions. The idea prevails, for instance, that personal popularity is a sort of miracle for which nobody can really account, and that love itself is like a thunderbolt that strikes one man down and leaves another standing by his side, and for which one may run up a lightning rod in vain.

The truth is that love is not a mystery. It is the plain working out of cause and effect. It is not even an air-fed orchid. It is a hardy annual that flourishes best in a kitchen garden and that blooms and blows, or withers and dies, according to the cultivation and care that it receives.

But the beautiful thing is that we may all have love and keep it if we will. It is a matter of volition and effort. We can pile up a fortune in affection, just as surely as we can one in dollars, and pretty much by the same means.

How do we make money? By supplying a long-felt want.

In precisely the same manner we make friends. Every human being on earth stands in eternal need of sympathy, of kindness, of personal interest, and no man or woman can offer these wares to their fellow creatures without getting a big return in affection.

Returns Many Fold

AND even as it is more profitable to cater to the luxuries of mankind than it is merely to supply the necessities, so those who minister to the vanity of others take a short cut to popularity.

The adroit flatterer, the patient listener and the glad-handed cliquer never rake their reward or have cause to complain that the world is cold and indifferent, and that they lack a seat at a dinner table or an invitation for a week-end party.

Further, we add to our treasures through investment, and no other speculation pays such dividends as does affection. To have love, we must put out love, but the love we lend to those about us, the tenderness and consideration we show them, comes back to us with its interest compounded every thirty days.

The debt of affection is one that is never repudiated. Sooner or later one always gets back his own and more.

Of course, there is such a thing as personal magnetism. There are people who attract others to them, apparently without effort, and to whom every heart turns as instinctively as the needle to the pole, but it will be found upon investigation that this so-called occult power is reducible to a liberal working formula of kindliness, generosity, spontaneous interest in others and tact.

Primarily every individual we see is indifferent to us. Brown and Jones are not thrilled with any emotion whatsoever when they meet us for the first time, and it is simply and wholly up to us to turn them into friends or leave them mere casual acquaintances. We can win their liking in the same way that other people have won ours.

Role Never Fails

WE like those of whose sympathy we are assured. We like those who show an interest in our personal affairs, who listen to our stories without yawning and laugh at our jokes, who make themselves pleasant and agreeable, and show a decent respect for our prejudices.

We love those who bind us to them by the ties of kindliness and human brotherhood, who weep with us in our sorrows and rejoice with us in our successes, and whose hands are stretched out to help us in our hour of need.

Conversely we dislike those who are brusque and brutal, and tactless and unsympathetic in their manners, and who can never come within forty feet of us without committing assault and battery upon our vanity and ruthlessly trampling all over the sensitive spots in our feelings.

No other rule of good and guide board on the road to popularity are needed except our own hearts. For the quick we love we love best. The fire that thaws out our indifference and makes us warm up to another will melt him toward us. It is a rule that never fails.

The only love that cannot be manufactured to order is romantic love, that mysterious thing between a man and a woman that makes the one seem a hero and the other a goddess in each other's eyes is indeed a whimsical gift of Fate, but the unswerving devotion and faith of either a man or a woman to another has been found to be a mighty satisfactory substitute in millions of cases.

Patient waiting is Cupid's undertaker, whether Jacob or Miss Jacob, with a fourteen-year devotion, sits down to camp on the doorstep of love, the little winged god generally comes out and surrenders.

Yes, indifference can be changed into liking, and love itself can be won. It can be compelled. It can be rabbed. It can be coerced. It can be amassed and laid up for a rainy day.

None need be friendless and loveless except those who are too lazy and selfish to get out and strive for the good opinion of their fellow-creatures, or who are so poor in heart themselves that they have no capital or love with which to go into business on their own account.
